WHY A HOME GUARD IS NEEDED

There are many benefits both of an immediate and of a prospective nature, that would be derived from an active home guard organization in the county seat. Of course there is the possibility of criminal disturbance within the county such as would require a number of men to quiet, and the sheriff would find in a well drilled home guard company a source of invaluable assistance at such a time. In fact the mere presence of a body of men trained in military discipline and action would likely discourage any premeditated violation of the peace of the county. Should in their desperate struggle to escape the inevitable defeat at the hands of the Allies, the Germans attempt thru their secret agents and spies in this country a general destruction of roads, railroads etc., or even the landing of a body of troops on the pacific coast, every community will be expected to take up their share of the work to prevent losses and exterminate such disturbers.

America is not a military nation and never will be in the sense that militarism has ruled and is ruling the people of Germany. Americans are not worshippers of false gods. Still we today are paying the penalty of unpreparedness. It is the duty of every man to prepare himself for service in any and every possible need. Every able bodied man should learn something about carrying and using a rifle. Every man is expected these days to know these things, and every community is expected to be so organized and prepared that any menace of our peace and safety may be thwarted at the very beginning.

However there are other reasons perhaps of more immediate import than these that make a home guard company desirable. In the first place military drill is one of the most interesting pastimes ever invented, as well as one of the best physical exercises. The war game of today is the biggest game ever played in the history of the world. Umpires, would be players, fans everyone cannot escape the enthusiasm of the play or the consequences of the outcome. We are all holding mighty big stakes and both intelligence and inclination should urge us to learn as much about the game as possible.

Congress is almost sure to raise the draft age limits and many more men of Malheur county will be called to the service before this war is over. For their benefit, if for nothing else, there should be a home guard company in the county in which they could learn the rudiments at least of drill movements, military discipline and army customs. Such training will not only make them better soldiers but will assure them earlier promotion. The records of young men leaving the well drilled home guard organizations in various parts of the state compared with the men who are sent to the camps without any military training whatsoever clearly show that a decided advantage this pre-training is to the individual. It also is a great help to the army for one of the hardest tasks is the development of non-commissioned officers to handle the ever incoming draft recruits.

From a standpoint of county citizenship it would almost pay any county to finance and sponsor home guard companies or units where every forty or more men will combine for military drill and training. Still the benefits will certainly pay the men to sponsor and finance their own training, regardless of who they are or their liability of being called into service.

Let the Vale home guard be called together and be organized for work. Let them face a little military discipline, and weary their muscles with a lot of hard drill. As soon as the hang of the regulations are conceived, the simplicity of the fundamentals and the extensiveness of the possible development will hold their attention and win the enthusiasm of every loyal American. It is like your first game of base ball. There were too many "why's?" running in your mind to play the game well. But after you had learned the rules you were more concerned with the "what and how?" Few opponents of military training have ever had any. None who take military training will ever regret it.

IRRIGATION AND THE SOLDIER

Those who have the disposal of the public domain and railroad lands in Canada are preparing to secure large numbers of our returning American soldiers at the conclusion of the war. To a certain extent their labors will be rewarded. The problem of what the hundreds of thousands of soldiers are to do upon their return is one that is receiving serious thought. Upon their return many will find their places filled by women who are doing the work well and with few exceptions will continue to hold them.

These men have been men of action. The everyday ordinary affairs of life will not satisfy them. They have been used to seeing gigantic tasks accomplished. They are coming home with the same determination to secure results. At the end of the civil war, owing to the forethought of statesmen the homestead law was passed, which made it possible for the then returning soldiers to procure a home, which they did in large numbers. To day our public lands are practically gone.

In place of free land we have thousands of acres of good land that are simply awaiting water to make them productive. Here is an avenue if properly financed, that will appeal to thousands of our soldier boys. The idea of the ownership of a home is one of the inherent rights and desires of the American youth. If the government will redeem the large arid tracts of the Northwest which it has had under consideration for years, known to be practical and will permit the soldier boys to have long time payments at low interest, the problem of what the returning soldier boys will do will be solved for thousands.

Private irrigation projects can do a similar work. The lands held by the Western Colonization Company within the Warm Springs irrigation project in our county will consist of several thousand acres of land that can be purchased under exactly the conditions above referred to.

It will be just as easy for the overseas boys to purchase a 40 or 80 acre irrigated tract, develop it and pay for it as it was for men returning from the fronts in 1865 to wrestle a home in the prairies of the west.

These men after being filled with the glory of the success of their arms in a foreign land, will more than ever want to return and become a part of the nation they fought for. They will not want to go to Canada, and it is the duty of our government and large land owners to see that such will not be necessary.

If the national heads of the several religious denominations now represented in Vale were to withdraw their support and decide not to permit any of their ministers to accept a pulpit here, our citizens would protest against such action. Yet if they did they would be doing just what any other line of business would be compelled to do that received no more support than do the churches of this city from the citizens of Vale.

American troops are proving a great tonic to the allied armies. The French and British have been standing the strain for four long years, but now that the sammys have begun to arrive and take their places along side of the Tommies and the Pollis, their presence has revived the spirits of the old time fighting vigor of the allies. It has been demonstrated in the present drive.

The general public are making sacrifices in order that the American soldier may have all of the comforts and necessities and as much of the luxuries as possible, but have little patience with the profiteers and expect the administration to see to it that there is no profiteering.
