"No Loafing" "Wherefore is it lawful to do good on the Sabbath day." Dr. Cuyler states that at the foot of Ludgate Hill is one of the most crowded thoroughfares of London. In the center of it, between two lamp-posts, there used to be a solid oak bench with a high back, and on that back was the inscription: "Rest but do not loiter." On that bench thousands of people in the course of every day used to rest their weary limbs. Like the poor man's bench in seething London stands the unrepented ordinance of the Sabbath, and over its blessed portals is written: "Rest, but do not lounge or loiter."
