KANRED HARD WHEAT IS HIGH IN YIELDS

Variety is Resistant to Leaf and Stem Rust.

Developed From Single Head of Crimean Wheat Selected at Kansas Experiment Station—Pure Seed is of Importance.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Kanred is a wheat which is resistant to prevalent forms of leaf and stem rust, is less liable to winter killing than the Turkey or Kharkof, and matures from one to four days sooner than those varieties, which sometimes means escape from bad weather conditions. It outyields the varieties named in the principal hard winter wheat section by from three to five bushels per acre. The variety was developed from a single head of Turkeys and Kanred Wheat—The Latter Yields More Because of Rust Resistance, Earliness and Hardiness.

Crimean wheat selected at the Kansas agricultural experiment station ten years ago, from which source it is estimated that 2,000,000 acres have been harvested in 1921.

"Kanred Wheat" is the title of Department Circular 194, just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. Kanred is a hard red winter wheat very similar to Turkey. It is bearded and has hairless white chaff. The superior yields of the Kanred variety in northern and northwestern Kansas, eastern Colorado, southwestern Wyoming, and in Nebraska and South Dakota appear to have been due largely to its resistance to rust and to winter killing.

Kanred wheat may be grown with success wherever other hard-winter wheats are grown and should partly replace the Turkey and Kharkof varieties now widely grown. It shows no special advantage in the northern great plains and the Pacific northwest. It cannot compete with the soft winter wheat varieties grown on the lower levels and the richer

Western Kansas or the eastern United States, and is not winter hardy enough to replace spring wheat in northern plains. Wherever Turkey or Kharkof hard-winter wheats are grown, however, the Kanred can be grown with equal chances of success. In milling and baking experiments Kanred has compared favorably with other hard red winter wheats. For successful growing pure seed is necessary, and because of similarity of the seed to other varieties certification has been found essential. This certification is made by the Kansas Crop Improvement association with the co-operation of the Kansas agricultural experiment station.
