CARING FOR SPRING CALVES Young Animals Should Be Quartered in Clean Shed or Lot and Given Proper Feed.

Dairy calves should be kept in a clean shed or lot and fed regularly, according to A. C. Baer, professor of dairy husbandry at Oklahoma A. and M. college. He suggests the following feeding schedule: First week-Feed three times a day

Second week-Feed three times a day of whole mlik.

Third week-Feed three-times a day but substitute one-third skim milk. Fourth week-Feed two or three times a day; one-half skim milk. Regulate the amount of milk to the size and vigor of the calf. "After the fourth or fifth week all skim milk can be fed and a little grain, ground oats, corn, barley, and a little bran," Baer says, "Let them eat some good hay, as much as they can eat.

"Calves can be kept on pasture, but should receive some grain and hay in addition. To prevent scours, all buckets and cans must be kept clean. The shed or lot should also be cleaned regularly."

Old Talecloths

An old tablecloth which has worn through around the edge of the table can be made into an attractive junch cloth. Cut it off where it is worn and use the outside part to make a hem between two and three inches wide, slip the edge of the cloth between the two edges of the fold and hem.

Best Roughage for Cows.

Clover hay is one of the best of all roughages for the cow. It furnishes large amounts of crude protein so essential to milk production and is palatable and much relished. Clover hay is unusually rich in lime and lime is also needed.

BIG COWS GIVE MOST PROFIT Records Show That Large Animale Are Biggest Producers of Milk and Butterfat. (Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Figures collected from various cow-testing associations throughout the $1.00. States Department of Agriculture tend to confirm the previous conclusions of the department that within the breeds. so far as they were represented by grades, the large cows are the biggest producers of dairy products and are also the most prolitable. The evidence seems to point to the fact that in the individual farmer's herd it will be found that on the average the larger cows are more profitable than the smaller ones, although there are some indications that this may not hold true in the case of herds of native cattle containing much beef blood. The cows whose records have been used by the department have been sorted out so that only mature animals were used for these comparisons, thus eliminating any differences that might have been caused by the immaturity of some cows.

In one group for which figures have been prepared there were 160 cown classified as small, 201 as medium, and 129 as large. The small cows aver aged 243 pounds of butterfat a year and made an income over the cost of feed of $77.39. Those of medium size made 289 pounds of butterfat and an income over feed cost of $88.91. The Miss Neva May Stoute went to large cows produced 345 pounds of butterfat and a return above feed cos of $105.74.

In another group there were 46 small cows. 483 classed as medium and 320 large. Those in the first classification made 240 pounds of but terfat on an average and an income over cost of feed of $89.11. The medi ums made 278 pounds of butterfat and $166.09 over feed cost. The large ones produced 299 pounds of butterfat and r feed cost of $108.2
