THE only note of opposition that has been advanced by a Portland publication on the Public Market proposition came out this week from the Spectator. Just why the Spectator should stand between the great mass of people and their desires is unexplainable unless the Spectator is in a class by itself and a few of the upper crust. The editor of that sheet says a lot of things that would look better unsaid. As a matter of fact we took particular attention to notice that at present there are not a larger proportion of vacant buildings in Seattle than there are in Portland. The L. C. Smith building is not occupied and neither is the Yeon building all in use. There are several other office buildings more or less vacant in Portland. In the down town districts there are not many vacant store buildings in Portland, but if you will get out into the suburbs you can find a "few." And this cannot be due to the Portland public markets for there are none.

Now as to the Japanese who participate in the Seattle markets and groceries. It is probable that the Japanese would not have invaded the Seattle business fields had not the people of Seattle offered them certain attractions. The same holds true in this section of the country. The Japanese fore-runners of the present representatives were brought here for servants. They found their relations less satisfactory than independent workers and so took up farming and business connections. What they are in relation to our economic relations we have made them ourselves and there is no one to blame but ourselves. They are here and they are going to stay here and the fact that they can look after themselves is rather to their credit.

It is to be hoped that the outcome of the market movement in Portland will be closer relations between producer and consumer, a reduction in the annual amount spent by the city merchants for delivery purposes, and if it really comes to be true that it effects the small grocer, that the result will be a reduction in rentals in the congested districts of the town by many institutions now crowded at the business center that may find it profitable to seek outlying locations where rents are not so high.

THE unfortunate turn relations with Mexico have taken within the past week will be regretted by every peace loving, right thinking citizen of our country. It seems to have been one of those unhappy things that could not be avoided. That being reasonably certain it is better that it be now than later. A dirty piece of work will be no better by delay. And appearances indicate that delay would have only added to the other fellows' resources. The real question for anxiety now is what will be the relations between warring factions in Mexico. If the rebels are sincere in their desire for better social conditions and civil rights they will continue as opponents of the Huerta regime. If they are merely contending for plunder they will endeavor to prolong hostilities by uniting with the Federals. Second, when the American soldiers win what will be the status assumed? Will Mexico become a dependent, a ward, or again allowed to continue its dubious course undirected?

R. C. Bonser, candidate for county surveyor on the Republican ticket, is well acquainted with the position he is seeking. He has been first assistant to the present surveyor, Mr. Holbrook, for several years and is known all over the county as a careful and competent honest, and efficient engineer. He is conservative in his attitude on the matter of piling up county expenses, or in his relation to the citizens whom he may meet in a business way.

The Spectator thinks that so long as the Oregonian is going to select the members of the Legislature it might as well be the Oregonian's editor who shall be chosen to represent the county. That is so. Why have a middle-man?

State Press Comment On Candidacy Of C. N. McArthur For Congress

Clifton N. McArthur, who made such an excellent record as Speaker of the House of the last legislative session, is a candidate for Congress in the Third District with a good chance of being the next Congressional representative from Portland. He is a staunch Republican, talented, and has given full demonstration of being a man of his word and faithful to the letter to the people's interests. Added to his many enviable qualifications is his well-known common sense. His platform should appeal to every voter of Portland, and the large majority should unhesitatingly give him their support, for Oregon needs a man of his calibre and impressions in Congress.

His strong endorsement of natural resources, reclamation of arid lands, a fair deal to both capital and labor, woman suffrage, and a six-year Presidential term and fewer elections. From the many pearls of Mr. McArthur's platform is this: "The drift of population toward large cities is one of the serious problems confronting the American people and it can only be solved by awakening a nation-wide interest in country life and the several branches of agriculture. A decrease in the size of the non-producing classes in the great centers of population and a corresponding increase in the number of producers on farms will add to the volume of foodstuffs and lessen the cost of living."—Woodburn Independent.

Those who have been closely associated with Mr. McArthur know him to be a man absolutely fair and square in all his dealings political or otherwise. The fact that he has filled the chair of Speaker of the Oregon Legislature for two terms and come out stronger and more highly respected each time, is proof that he is a man whom the people can trust in the conduct of their business. If more men of this class were elected to office there would be a higher respect for our public officials.—Klamath Falls Herald.

While McArthur is a young man, he is recognized as one of the ablest men of public affairs in the state. He has occupied positions of trust and responsibility with credit to the state and honor to himself. He is thoroughly familiar with the needs of the Third District and the entire state.—St. Helens Mist.

Mr. McArthur is a man with a record of capable accomplishment. By dint of hard work, backed by ability and political sense, he has won his way to a leading position in state legislative affairs. An able lawyer, his experience, political and professional, has brought him in close contact with general conditions throughout the state.—Bend Bulletin.

McArthur has a good idea of affairs in the state, is honest in his intentions, capable of making a Congressman of worth to the district and to the nation.—La Grande Observer.

Clifton N. McArthur, twice Speaker of the Oregon House of Representatives, and one of the cleanest and ablest young men in his native state, has announced himself a candidate for the republican nomination for Congress in the Portland district. In recognition of merit and for the honor of Portland and the state he ought to have no trouble in winning. Mr. McArthur will make a valuable member in the national halls of legislation, where his grandfather, Colonel Nesmith, shone with such distinction 50 years ago. Harney County News.

Polk County takes more than a casual interest in the announcement that C. N. McArthur is a candidate for Congress to succeed A. W. Lafferty. While Polk will not get to cast a vote for the owner of the Nesmith farm at Rickreall, yet Polk will aid by boosting a little now and then. "Pat," as the natives know him, wears a number eight hat, and it covers good Oregon brains that should be of service to the state back in the capitol. The Monitor hopes to see him win the race.—Independence Monitor.

Mr. McArthur has a good record in the Oregon Legislature. He comes from a fine line of people. He is a graduate of the University of Oregon and a bright, progressive young man with a very wide circle of personal friends throughout the state.—Oregon City Enterprise.

C. N. McArthur, who recently announced himself as a candidate for Congress for the Third District, is a grandson of James W. Nesmith who was an early pioneer of Oregon and United States Senator from this state during the Civil War period. McArthur is a young man of considerable ability and ought to be able to beat Lafferty, the present incumbent, who will make the race again.—Newberg Graphic.

Mr. McArthur is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress from the Third Oregon District—Multnomah County.—Paid Adv.

LAFFERTY FIGHTS FOR FREE TOLLS

Being a member of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Congressman Lafferty, from this district, was in a position to make a minority report against the President's repeal measure. Mr. Lafferty made good use of the opportunity, filing a strong report against repeal, which furnished the foundation for the speeches of several Members who opposed repeal on the floor of the House. A part of Mr. Lafferty's minority report follows:

"Prof Emory Johnson, of the University of Pennsylvania, has just stated that if the United States exempts coasting vessels from the payment of tolls the Government will lose thereby in canal revenues the sum of $20,000,000 in 10 years. From an economic point of view can not the people well afford to lose $20,000,000 in revenue from canal tolls in 10 years if, by so doing, they save in the same period $100,000,000 or more in freight rates.

"The people who have already put into the canal $400,000,000, equal to $4 per head of our population, and no one proposes to get that back. It is only proposed to charge tolls to maintain the running expenses of the canal. The $20,000,000 that we would lose in canal revenues in 10 years by exempting coasting vessels would be only 20 cents per head of our population. By that policy no citizen would lose in canal revenues over 60 cents in 30 years—a generation.

"Now, while each generation would lose in canal revenues 60 cents per head by exempting coasting vessels, how much would they gain thereby? Say the tolls would be $1.50 per ton. At that rate lumber shipped from the Pacific coast to New Orleans or New York would pay $2.25 per thousand feet for passing through the canal, as a thousand feet of lumber weighs practically a ton and a half. That would make Pacific coast lumber cost in the Mississippi Valley or on the Atlantic seaboard $2.25 more per thousand feet than it would cost if we exempt our coastwise trade from the payment of tolls. On this one item of lumber alone each citizen east of Kansas City who builds a house during his life time would profit by free canal tolls from $25 to $100, while he would save by charging tolls only 60 cents. Savings in food products and other heavy freight from coast to coast would be in like proportion.

"The secret of this great economic advantage is that canal rates will effect transcontinental rail rates, and thereby the saving to the American people from free tolls in forcing reductions in rail rates will be millions, while the saving in revenues by refusing to exempt our coasting vessels from the payment of these tolls will be negligible."—Paid Advt.

The Horse Fair

(It is the custom of the teacher in this grade to give a story relative to the topic, make a study of the artists production, etc., then a short outline is prepared and the pupil prepares the composition from that.—Ed.)

The name, "Horse Fair," almost describes the picture itself. It shows that the artist has taken very much pains in selecting the different moods of action. The horses are at an exhibit, and are very excited.

Rosa Bonheur's father, Raymond Bonheur, was an artist of French descent. Her mother was a musician, who helped to earn the meager living by giving music lessons. Marie Rosalie Bonheur, was born in Bordeaux, France, October 22, 1822. She was very happy in her early home with all her beloved pets. When she was about eight years of age her parents moved to the large city of Paris, so of course Rosa received most of her education at a convent. She was very unruly as a child. She would cartoon the teachers and hang them on the walls. Sometimes Rosa was not to be found at school, and after some searching, was located and would be found drawing pictures in the dust, or looking at some gay sign. The nuns soon became out of patience with her and sent her home. Rosa's greatest talent was art. Her first picture that was exhibited was called "Rabbits Eating Carrots" and was exhibited when she was nineteen years old. Her pictures were annually exhibited after that. Her master piece, "The Horse Fair" was placed on exhibit when she was twenty-eight. This picture brought her among some of the most famous artists that ever lived. Her last days were spent on her farm at Fountainbleaux. She had a very dear American friend by the name of Anna Klumpke. Mademoiselle Bonheur willed all of her property to this friend, and asked her to share her tomb. Her greatest desire was to have as many animals as she wanted and this desire was granted to her. She died at the age of seventy-seven after leading a very happy life.

Rosa Bonheur must have been inventive and artistic to portray such a wonderful picture. There are many different breeds of horses shown. The two dapple gray horses look very gentle and steady, while there is the black horse who seems very high spirited. There is the fine black race horse, and the little peevish pony who seems very disagreeable because he is not as large as the big draught horses. In the back ground is seen many other horses. This beautiful picture is eight feet high and sixteen feet long. It took the artist eighteen months to select her animals for the picture. When the picture was finished she offered it to her home town for twelve thousand francs, but they thought that was too much, so England came forward and bought it for forty thousand francs. Then a rich American bought it for fifty-five thousand dollars and placed it in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City.

The literature for this sketch was found in two copies of "The Ladies Home Journal" and the Encyclopedia, Book about Famous Artists, and from the picture, "The Horse Fair."
