Gentle Reminder.
A gentleman, on a visit to another city, entered a restaurant and on leaving took away with him by mistake a hat belonging to another man. The hats were so nearly identical that the mistake was not detected, and the surprise of the gentleman may be imagined when, reaching home, he glanced at the lining of the hat and found written there the words, "You darned fool, what did you take this hat for?"—Lippincott's.

A Missing Man.
"What has become of the old fashioned man," asks the Cincinnati Enquirer, "who used to wear a yard of crape on his hat?" Perhaps he's married again.—Toledo Blade.

Both Bad.
"Is there anything worse than owing money you can't pay?"
"Yes; being owed money you can't collect." Boston Transcript.

No one of us may do that which if done by all would ruin society.

An Englishman, who recently visited this country for the purpose of hunting big game in the West and in British Columbia, relates a story of a friend, who was lion-shooting in Uganda.

This sportsman had had excellent luck. Nearly every day he would pose beside a freshly killed lion or other beast and his photographer would snap him for the magazines.

One afternoon the picture man, who was taking a nap in the hat, was awakened by a loud noise. He arose and looked out. Sprinting toward him from the woods, had gone and coat tails flying, came his chief. At a considerable distance behind, luckily for the hunter, stalked a huge lion.

"Quick! Quick! Open the door, Dick!" exclaimed the hunter. "I'm bringing one home alive."

Occasionally a man can be judged by the company he keeps away from.—Tom Tipton, Williamsport, O., News.

BELGIAN KONGO SAVAGES.

Cannibals in War Paint Whose Past is Black Mystery.

In his book "Hunting and Hunted in the Belgian Congo" Mr. R. D. Cooper speaks of the remarkable people who live in the forest wilds:
"Threading our way down the stony path, winding in and out among the trees, we began to walk the remaining few miles along the sandy shore to Butiaba. A slight breeze sprang up from the southwest, and very shortly the sun had kissed the Bulegga mountain peaks that rose thousands of feet sheer from the water's edge in the west.

"Gaunt forbidding sentinels of the Congo! What strange people dwell behind you—the dwarfs and others, with their poisoned implements of war—cannibalism with all its attendant horrors—a people that cannot tell us of their past. The ages gone by are all a blank to them. These people are akin to the beasts of the forest, inasmuch as they care only for the present. They live for the present. The past is gone. No records have been written of them.

"The war paint of vermilion colored pigments which is smeared all over their bodies adds to the hideousness of these savages, darting from rock to rock, hiding behind trees, lying hidden in the foliage overhead, waging war with all. Tragedy follows tragedy behind those Bulegga mountains in the Congo, to the south of which lie the snow capped crests of rugged Ruwenzori."

QUEER JOURNALISTIC FEAT.

It hit the London Times and Boomed the Manchester Guardian.

Once there was an obscure subeditor of the Manchester Guardian in England. It was a long time ago, and the Guardian was scarcely known outside of its own city.

The subeditor had a habit of drinking ale until he was so drowsy that he could not lift his head from his desk. On one occasion the composing room was yelling for "copy," as the editorial page was absolutely vacant.

The subeditor had been asleep on his desk for hours and his pen had been idle. The foreman of the composing room finally succeeded in arousing the man and yelled in his ear that something must be done for copy.

Whereupon the sleepy one grabbed a pair of shears and clipped one whole column from the editorial page of the London Times. At the top he wrote in a crabbed hand:
"What does the London Times mean by the following?"

It was printed, column and all. That single quizzical introduction made the Manchester Guardian famous. People began to ask what the Times did mean by the editorial, which was on a rather revolutionary subject. The subeditor slept for several hours, but John E. Wilkie says his paper's greatness began from that moment—Washington Star.

"Engaged Man's Panic."
"Engaged man's panic" is as familiar a phenomenon as the squawking of a captured chicken or the flopping of a hooked fish. And woman instinctively anticipates it, feels it before it actually begins, deals with it according to her abilities. No woman ever feels that this is a slur upon her. She knows that it does not involve her, but is only the nervousness of the free at the touch of the matrimonial bride—and that bride, as she knows and as he knows, is not in her hands, but in the hands of society. Even the man marrying for a home, even the man marrying for children or for money, even the man marrying because only by marriage can be hope to get some one to associate with him, bear with him, listen to him on terms of his own arranging—even these men feel the nervousness as the bride drops over their heads and the bit presses their quivering lips.—From "Deggarmo's Wife," by David Graham Phillips.

"Knotty" History.
Tying knots in a handkerchief to jog one's memory had its origin in China thousands of years ago. Before writing was invented in that country, which did not happen until 3000 B. C., memorable and important events were recorded by long knotted cords. The most ancient history of China is still preserved as told by these knots. When Emperor Tschang Ki invented writing the entire system of "knotting" was abandoned. And today the memory knots made by us in handkerchiefs are the only surviving descendants of that ancient custom.

Cooper's Hawk.
The almost universal prejudice against birds of prey is due to the activities of a few members of the hawk family, chief among which is the Cooper's hawk. Cooper's hawk usually approaches under cover and drops on unsuspecting victims, making great inroads on poultry yards and game coverts. This bird, together with its two near relations, the sharp shinned hawk and the goshawk, should be destroyed by every possible means.

He Wanted to Know.
"Charles," said the teacher, "do you know the causes of the Revolutionary war?"
Charles looked interestedly at his instructor and replied, as if carrying on a social conversation, "No, do you?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

Amber.
Amber is believed by the Turks to be an infallible guard against the injurious effects of alcohol; hence its extensive use for mouthpieces of pipes.
