They hold their meetings at Holway's store.

Last Friday, Frank Carter, living east of Lents on Foster road, hired a team to haul wood. His mother was riding with him. Mr. Carter got out to get a switch and the horses ran away. Mrs. Carter, unable to control the horses was thrown out and badly bruised. She was taken to the hospital, where she is getting along as well as can be expected.

That Malheur County is rapidly coming to the front as a dairy section is indicated by the report from the cheese factory at Nyssa. This is a co-operative institution and at the present rate of operation, the disbursements for this year for milk and wages will amount to at least $35,000. The factory is now paying 30 cents per pound for butter fat. Several of the heavy milk producers in the county are arranging to materially increase their herds.

Kennel Facts

The close associations of dogs with vermin as flies and lice, also with live stock as sheep, rabbits, hogs, etc., explains in a measure why the dog is victim to so many different tapeworms.

In the life cycle of the dog tapeworms, there are generally two forms: the adult tapeworm in the dog, and the cystic form in some other animal or in some parasite. Tapeworm segments containing eggs are eliminated in fecal matter of the dog. Segments decompose, the eggs liberated, and may become scattered by the rain, wind, etc. Food or water contaminated by the eggs may be taken into the digestive tract of another host, or animal. In the stomach of the host the egg hatches, the embryo thus formed penetrates thru the stomach or the intestinal wall, and becomes encysted in muscles, liver, fat, peritoneal cavity, etc., according to the particular kind of tapeworm cyst.

If that part of the host containing the cyst be eaten by a dog, the cyst may develop into a tapeworm in the dog's intestinal tract, thus completing the life cycle. Fleas or lice may ingest the eggs from fecal matter, and get the cystic form of one kind of tapeworm. The dog in biting the insect may get the same into its stomach, the cyst liberated and thus a tapeworm is formed. The cystic forms of two tapeworms are found in the rabbit, at least three in the sheep, one for the hog, etc.

Prevention: Keep dogs free from vermin, and keep quarters clean. Do not feed raw meats, especially mutton, and have the same well cooked. Treat dogs for tapeworms under veterinary advice.—H. S. Eakins, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.

Cut Worms

Frequent requests have been received relative to injury caused by common cut worms which are more or less prevalent every year.

The brownish moth lays the eggs for this generation late in the summer or early fall on grasses. The young cut worms hatch and feed upon the adjacent vegetation. With an abundance of food the small larvae attract very little attention, burrowing into the ground during the day, and feeding only at night. At the approach of winter the larvae, which are about half grown, burrow into the soil and hibernate, coming up again the next spring and feeding upon whatever vegetation is at hand. Their depredations continue until the middle or latter part of May, when they become full grown and burrow into the soil about two inches, and there transform to pupae and adult. About the middle or latter part of June, the moths emerge and cause no little annoyance by entering houses and fluttering around the lamps at night.

Under ordinary conditions prevention is the best remedy. Plowing in the late fall or early spring, with frequent disking or harrowing, will be effective. In areas where the worms are concentrated, an application of arsenical bait will prove effective. A good formula is as follows:

Paris green 1/2 lb.
Bran 50 lbs.
Syrup 1 qt.
Water 2 gals.

Mix while dry the Paris green and bran until an even color is attained. Then stir the syrup and water, making a crumbly, but not sloppy mash. Scatter this mixture thinly over the infested areas in the afternoon or early evening. The amount to be used will vary in accordance with the severeness of the attack, but ordinarily, twenty-five to forty pounds is sufficient to cover an acre.—C. B. Jones, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.

A Spanish Legend.

A rocky eminence on the outskirts of Granada, Spain, is known as "El ultimo sospiro del Moro" (the last sigh of the Moor), because, according to the legend, Roubill, the last Moorish monarch, took leave there of the land of his birth.
