THE LOST HOUSE

A Mutual Masterpiece. Will Positively be Shown at the Yeager Theatre June 29 and 30.

Dosia Dale, a Kentucky heiress, has been imprisoned in Dr. Prothero's private asylum by her uncle and guardian. The uncle has squandered his ward's fortune and realizing he must soon give an accounting, he hires Dr. Prothero to assist him in making away with Dosia. The unfortunate girl is locked in an upper room, but she manages to drop a note from one of the windows.

LILLIAN GISH IN "THE LOST HOUSE," FOUR-PART MUTUAL MASTERPIECE.

Produced by Majestic.

The missive falls into the hands of Ford a young reporter, who starts an investigation. He wires Dosia's home and learns she is travelling with her uncle.

Realizing the girl's danger, Ford sets out to find the house in which she is held a prisoner. He hires a hand organ and wanders up and down the street in which the note was found singing southern melodies. While he is singing "My Old Kentucky Home" a glove drops from an upper window and he knows the "Lost House" is found. Having instructed his friend Cuthbert to bring the police if he is not out of the house by a certain hour, he gains admission to the asylum by pretending to be a naval officer suffering from a nervous breakdown. He at once locates Dosia but is discovered by her uncle and Prothero. Ford and the girl barricade themselves in a room and the siege begins.

The police come to their aid and a terrific battle ensues, as the conspirators are armed with high-power rifles. Finally, the militia are called out. The house catches on fire, but Ford and Dosia escape to the roof. Dr. Prothero and the uncle are killed; Ford and the girl are rescued by the fire department and the final picture is one of love triumphant over peril and death.
