FARMER'S PICNIC COMING

County Grange Planning Big Farmer's Picnic For the Twenty-Fourth. Free to All.

Gresham will be the Mecca of about two thousand farmers, their friends, cousins, aunts and uncles on the 24th of this month. The County Fair Grounds have been placed at the disposal of the Grange authorities and the day will be given over to a picnic and its attendant pleasures. The program will begin at 10:30 in the morning with a chorus of seventy-five voices.

Then there will be an address of welcome by Mr. Geo. Stapleton, Mayor of Gresham, which will be followed by other addresses by State Master Spence and Governor Withycombe. The Chorus will render several selections and the Pleasant Home Band will assist in filling the air with melody.

Along about noon there will be a lunch basket skirmish and in which several Grangers will be retired with a charge of pie and cake and other rural luxuries. There will probably be ammunition enough of this sort to retire the entire force and then after a brief rest the fun of the day will begin. Every Grange in the county is expected to be represented in some sort of comic stunt. There will be some stunning stunts no doubt as the committees appointed to prepare these features are busy now getting things fixed up for the event.

Following this there will be a score of races all backed with worthy prizes. The fat man's race and the fat woman's race will have their part in the program. Then there will be boys' races and girls' races, sack races, potato races, barrel races, a pillow fight, three-legged races and a lot of other races that have not yet been named. It is probable that there will be a boys' pony race.

All the program features of the day will be free but there will be peanuts and popcorn for sale, and probably ice cream and candy, hot coffee, and sinkers, and hot dog, and a few other luxuries that go to make picnic life a blissful song.

Contrary to the possible notion that some may get, the grangers will not confine their picnic to members of the order. All farmers, particularly, will be invited to attend, and anyone else that might want to come will be welcome. It is hoped that everyone will feel perfectly free to attend and enjoy themselves to the limit.

TO KEEP MEAT IN HOT WEATHER

A few simple precautions will aid the housewife in keeping meat untainted in hot weather. It is, of course, common knowledge that the higher the temperature, the quicker meat will spoil, but the family's supplies are not absolutely at the mercy of the thermometer. Ice and cleanliness are two great weapons of defense.

For many families a refrigerator is obviously out of the question, but it is perhaps better to have no refrigerator at all than a neglected one. Merely to wash it out occasionally does little good; it should be thoroughly scalded at frequent intervals, in particular the drain. This, if overlooked, is apt to harbor fungous growths, which may spread to the food. On one occasion a man applied to the department because he had found that a joint of beef placed in his refrigerator had turned a peculiar red. Upon examination it was ascertained that the meat was covered with a peculiar fungous growth due entirely to the condition of the refrigerator. Growths of this kind do not always advertise themselves so prominently and there may be much evil in an ice box that the eye can not detect.

If the refrigerator drain is not thoroughly cleaned, moreover, it is likely to become choked, the water is not carried off quickly enough and little pools are left standing in the interior. Dampness is one of the conditions most favorable to bacterial growth. An ice box in this state will not protect food long. It is, in fact, a wise precaution to wipe the interior of a refrigerator every day with a dry cloth.

The temperature of the average refrigerator is higher than most persons suppose, and in those households where a regular supply of ice is not obtainable a cool cellar, a spring house, or the depths of a well may serve somewhat the same purpose. On farms where there is an ice house the meat may be placed in some form of closed retainer and buried in the ice. In any event, the meat must be carefully screened from flies. The danger from infection from these pests has been pointed out many times, but familiarity breeds contempt and they still persist. The fly not only does the meat itself no good, but it may readily deposit upon it some infection, which is carried in turn by the meat into the human system. Some flies will deposit their eggs on the meat and these in a short time will become maggots, and the meat is "flyblown."

Much sickness that is popularly ascribed to ptomaine poisoning or to bad food in general is really caused in some such way as this, the food, in itself perfectly wholesome, acting merely as a mechanical carrier for the "germs" which cause the trouble. Some of these sorts come from the human intestine, and their presence is a sure indication that filth is present, even if too small to be seen. Filth of this kind may be carried from dust, but it more often comes from soiled hands. One might wish that every kitchen could have the sign found in some well-managed food factories—"When you leave the room for any purpose, wash your hands before you return to work."

"Germs" which grow in foods and cause illness grow very rapidly, particularly if the food is a little warm, and are not destroyed unless the food is well cooked before serving. Simply "warming up" is not enough, as was found in a case of illness recently reported after eating some warmed-up creamed vegetable. Certain kinds of foods—creamed chicken, or custard, or warmed vegetables, for example—are excellent culture mediums for bacteria which may have been introduced into them by accident. For this reason it is a safe rule to have as short a time as possible intervene between the preparation of food and its consumption. Broth is another excellent medium and in consequence should be drained off if it is intended to keep the meat for any length of time before serving. If the broth is used also it should be boiled thoroughly first. All food, cooked or uncooked, should be kept in a clean, cool place in order to reduce the danger of infection to a minimum.

When meat must for any reason be kept for unusually long periods of time or when the conditions are unusually unfavorable scalding may be resorted to advantageously. Dropping the meat into boiling water for a few minutes will not seriously affect its flavor when it ultimately appears upon the table, and it will put it in a much better condition for keeping. It is important however, that it be dipped in a large body of boiling water. If only a small amount of water is used, the introduction of the meat will lower the tem-

OREGON HONORED BY VISIT FROM HISTORIC BELL

People of the West who have never had an opportunity to visit Philadelphia appreciate the favor shown by that city when it voted an appropriation of $75,000 to bring the famous Liberty Bell to the Pacific Coast. It arrived in Portland at 6:30 this morning and was shown before the Courthouse in Portland during the forenoon. Thousands of people passed up the street to view it. Probably no other attraction ever brought to Portland ever was shown more homage than this venerated memorial of Revolutionary times.

It left Philadelphia at three o'clock on the afternoon of July 5th, making over fifty stops in the tour it has taken and will be seen by millions of the American people. It will appear in San Francisco tomorrow at six in the afternoon.

The Oregon Society of the Sons of the Revolution has prepared the following historical statement concerning the bell:

"Liberty Bell was cast in London in 1752. It reached Philadelphia in August of that year, and was twice recast in Philadelphia under the direction of Isaac Norris, who hung it in the Pennsylvania State House in June, 1753. It tolled all day on October 31, 1765, when the Stamp Act was put in operation and again on June 1, 1774, when the Port of Boston was closed by act of Parliament. On the 27th of December, 1773, it summoned the people of Philadelphia to a public meeting, which refused to permit the ship 'Polly' to land its cargo of tea, and on the 25th of April, 1775, it called a meeting which ratified the action of Massachusetts in offering armed resistance at Lexington and Concord. It rang to assemble each session of the Continental Congress.

"It bears an inscription from Leviticus 25:10: 'Proclaim liberty throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof.' The Bell fulfilled this commission in July, 1776. When John Nixon read the Declaration of Independence to the people assembled in Independence Square, old Andrew McNair rang the Bell, and its peals led in the first demonstration of Americans rejoicing over the independence of their country. The Bell has always been venerated because of this circumstance. It was removed from Philadelphia to Bethlehem after the battle of the Brandywine, and during the British occupation of Philadelphia it was hid beneath the floor of a church at Allentown, Pennsylvania. When the British evacuated the city the Bell was taken back to its shrine. It was cracked on the 8th of July, 1835, while tolling at the funeral of John Marshall, the great Chief Justice who transformed the Federal Constitution from paper into power."

perature to such an extent that the whole process becomes worthless. With such meats as veal or pork, which are always—ought to be—thoroughly done, the precaution can be carried further and the joints partially cooked before being stored away. Care should be taken, however, to see that the re-cooking is thoroughly done.

Hot weather also calls for additional precautions on the part of the housewife in regard to canned products. Once these have been opened and exposed to the air they spoil as quickly, if not more quickly, than fresh food. The contents of a can should therefore be disposed of without delay. In no event should they be left in the can after it has been opened, but should be used at once unless the housekeeper wishes to "air" the canned material, which some believe desirable. If this is done, the can contents should be transferred to a clean earthen or glass dish and put away for an hour or two in a cool place where dust will not reach it.

JUDGE PAROLES MRS. FOWLE AND DAUGHTER

In accord with a statement made by Judge Gatens last Saturday at Lents Grange, he has paroled Mrs. Elizabeth Fowle of Creston, and her daughter Harriet. The judge said Saturday that he did not think Mrs. Fowle understood the nature of her offense. Had she been a better informed woman she would have known better than do as she did. She was humiliated with the approaching disgrace and she took the only means she could think of to protect the good name of her family from public censure.

In court Monday morning the Judge rendered decision and paroled the two women. He turned Mrs. Fowle over to her husband and suspended sentence on the girl until the father of the child is located. The judge has an opinion as to who this is but as yet no definite action has been taken. Among other things the judge said in rendering sentence:

"The crime is one such as is committed daily by many of the respectably married people of the country, usually for no other reason than a wish to avoid the responsibility and burden of rearing a large family.

"The mother of this unfortunate girl had other children to bring up, whom, as she has said, 'would have to endure the sneers and jeers of society,' and, half crazed by the thought of the disgrace which the birth of the child must bring to the innocent members of her family if made public, she, in her ignorance and desperation, thought to save them, and committed this awful deed."

Judge Gatens censured the "double standard of morals which blames the woman and allows the man to go free."

"Bring these men into court," he said, "and make them stand trial with the girls upon whom they have brought or helped to bring disgrace, and soon we shall put an end to this sort of thing."

Mrs. Fowle, who is 52 years old, is the mother of 10 children.

This country has a new submarine chief, who will now put the service in shape for war. This is wise.

Standing of Contestants

Candidates in the contest are just beginning to wake up. The week has not been all that it should have been but that has not been altogether the fault of the contestants. It has been impossible to see all the contestants and they do not have a very definite idea of the plan of the contest, but within the next two or three days it is hoped that every candidate may be seen and started into the work.

It should discourage no one that some time has elapsed since the first announcement. There is ample time to see every one in the entire Mt. Scott district, and a good many outside that. Owing to delays in getting started it has been decided to extend the time for the contest till September first. It is hoped that a further extension of time will not be necessary.

The mere fact that several have made some start should discourage none of the candidates. It is probable that over a million votes will be necessary to win the first prize in the contest. The few already won is a mere start and there is ample time to get in and make a good race.

JAPANESE AFFAIR BADLY TWISTED

City Reporters Got Gilbert Station Japanese Incident Badly Twisted. Love Affair Far Fetched Fable.

Nobody was more surprised over the trouble between Matsuda and Y. Ynakashima as told in last week's papers, than the girl in the family of Ynakashima, who was supposed to have been the cause of the whole affair. The Herald made an effort to get the matter straight but was unable at the time to get any further information.

Ynakashima has for the past two years been a renter on the farm of Donald Furey, a mile east of Lents on the Gilbert road. Quite contrary to representations Mr. Furey says that Ynakashima is a very easy man to get along with and is a man of excellent intentions. He says the whole trouble was with the quality of liquor the men were using in their celebration on the day of the Fourth. The girl was not in the case at all.

The girl, Chiyo, (Sheo) is a niece of Matsuda and so there were no reasons for the statement that he had any notion of marrying her, or that her father had ever made an agreement whereby Matsuda was to give $1000 for her, or that he had ever paid over $600 and that the row was over the balance. As a matter of fact Matsuda has not been living in this part of the country for some time, having been employed about some logging camp for the past year. He was in Portland the day before the day before the Fourth and young Ynakashima, brother of the girl, who is employed driving a truck, asked him to come out home with him. After they got out here Matsuda and Ynakashima got a little too much of several kinds of tonic and for some reason grew quarrelsome. Matsuda struck his brother-in-law with a club and Ynakashima proceeded to carve him with a heavy knife, not unlike a machete or cleaver. The result was that both men were disabled. By the time the officers arrived the men were so wild in drunken excitement that they said everything they could think of and mixed it badly at that. The result was that they were adjudged bad men and the sheriff's office is expecting to see both men indicted for murderous intent, whereas they will be found to be entirely peaceable when their jag wears off.

Ynakashima was formerly a cook in a Seattle Hotel and has been steward on some of the Sound boats. He has been living in this country for a long time. He lived at Hillsdale before coming to Gilbert, and has always enjoyed a good reputation. The girl speaks English excellently, writes a fine hand and is quite a pretty girl. Her brother is in the second year in high school in Portland. Ynakashima does not write English.

Both men are getting along nicely at the county jail and will be able to leave the jail, well, soon, unless held for the grand jury. Ynakashima says he don't want any more liquor.

Garden Hints

Root maggot of cabbage and cauliflower may be checked by applying equal parts of powdered alum and air slaked lime around the roots. Tobacco juice is good. A spoonful of ground saltpetre in a bucket of water, applied twice a day is said to be good for wire worms.

Card of Thanks

Printed words will but poorly express the gratitude we feel for our neighbors and friends for all they have done to aid and comfort us during the sickness and death of our wife, mother and sister. But we wish to thus publicly thank each and every one for the tender, pitying care, they took of her whom we mourn. Also for the floral tributes of love and respect so freely given. Volney J.
