Among the number to visit the fire district near Mt. Hood Saturday was B. Mulrane of Lents. He spent one day on the firing line and decided that the climate was too warm for him. After doing some strenuous work he got lost toward evening. He decided that the mountains had no charms for him and traded his credit for a ride home. He says the experience was worth all it cost, but he had all he wants.

A number of young people led by Bill Steiger and Andrew Heiman went to the mountains last week for a little outing. While there the fires broke out and the boys were called into the fire fighting service, and the girls came home alone. Andrew held his job for a short time and then he crippled himself by cutting his arm. He came home the next day and is recovering nicely.

Dr. McSloy and Axel Kildahl took a trip to Seaside Sunday by auto. They started from Lents at six o'clock and reached Seaside at four. They report an exceptionally fine trip. Some of the road is a little rough but they were much surprised to find so much of it in good condition. A little corduroy the other side of Rainier was the roughest experience until they reached Astoria and between that place and Seaside there is some pretty difficult road. Doctor says the road to Astoria has the upper Columbia road beaten for fine scenery.
