OBITUARY.

On the afternoon of Oct. 2, Mary Margaret McMahon entered into rest, near 9th and Gibbs St., Portland.

The deceased was born March 3, 1899 at Portland. For six years she has made her home with Mrs. Riggs on eighth avenue, Lents. "Grandma" Riggs has had more or less to do with the training of the departed since she was about three years of age. Of her immediate family a brother, Arthur, is left to mourn her loss. Four years ago she was converted and baptized by the pastor of the Christian and Missionary Alliance. Classmates from the Woodmere school acted as pallbearers. A large number of friends and classmates filled the auditorium of the Finley Undertaking Co's. chapel. The sermon was preached by J. M. Nelson, pastor of the Lents Baptist Church. The interment was in Rose City Park Cemetery.

WHITE FELT SAILOR.

The chic hat for early autumn wear is the felt sailor. The one shown here is of rose colored felt with a binding of cream fallie silk about the brim and a band of the same silk about the crown.

A PRINCESS MODEL.

A charming one piece gown which stimulates a jacket effect is shown in this illustration made of blue serge and trimmed with braid and buttons. The skirt is attached to a yoke which does not extend across the front. Of course this garment must have a very well cut foundation.

HANDSOME FOX SET.

Cross fox set consisting of mink and scarf is worn with navy gaberdine princess gown and smart velvet turban.

THE SLEEVELESS BOLERO.

Sleeveless bolero vest coats made of broadly striped satins in navy and white, black and white and garnet and white, with their edges bound with white silk braid or milliners' folds of white velvet, are the newest tricks offered in fancy waist styles.

They are worn with underblouses of sheerest linen, chokered very high with lace inserted boned collars, or of white net which sports cordings of velvet to match the suit worn.
