HONOR JEFFERSON ON HIS BIRTHDAY

Plan on Foot to Celebrate the Anniversary Annually.

MAKE APRIL 13 A HOLIDAY.

All Democratic Organizations in the Country Expected to Hold Special Meetings This Year—Something About the Likes and the Work of the Author of the Declaration.

Efforts are now on foot to have congress pass a bill which would make April 13, Jefferson's birthday, a holiday. While there are no national legal holidays in the United States, there are many days which are regarded as being holidays, and Jefferson's birthday is not one of these. There are many persons who think that the nation should more universally celebrate the anniversary of the birth of the author of the Declaration of Independence. For many years it has been customary for Democrats in various parts of the country to meet on April 13 and hold some suitable celebration.

For the past ten years the National Democratic League of Clubs has been encouraging and promoting this movement and urging Democrats everywhere to get together, confer, plan and act in harmony. The results of these efforts are manifest. Each year the custom has grown until now there is hardly a Democratic organization in the country that does not enter into this observance with enthusiasm and a determination to make each succeeding celebration eclipse the previous one.

Jefferson's public life began in 1769 when he took his seat as a member of the Virginia house of burgesses. He was twenty-six years of age at the time. This was only a little more than two years previous to his occupancy of Monticello, which he called his home during the remainder of his life.

Therefore all the great things in the life of this great American were centered about this "little mount," and next to the home of Washington at Mount Vernon, the home of Jefferson at Monticello, both in the same state, is one of the great American shrines.

When Mrs. Jefferson's father died a year after their marriage she fell heir to an estate consisting of 40,000 acres and 135 slaves. This fund doubled the Jefferson estate, and the young statesman began busying himself in the most pleasing kinds of agriculture, laying out gardens, introducing new products, arranging his farms, completing and furnishing his house and exerting every effort to convert his little mountain, covered with primeval forest, into an agreeable and accessible park. After many experiments he domesticated almost every tree and shrub, native and foreign, that could survive the Virginia winter.

It was at Monticello that Jefferson prepared the draft of instructions for Virginia's delegation to the congress which met at Philadelphia. His activity in the cause of the colonies brought him into special disfavor with the British, and it was planned to capture Jefferson at Monticello through Tarleton's raiders.

Jefferson was warned that the enemy was coming to Monticello, and he sent his family away, and he himself escaped on horseback. The mansion at Monticello, thanks to Tarleton's orders, escaped serious pillage or damage. Though the house itself was not plundered or burned, the best of Jefferson's property suffered severely at the hands of the enemy. All the stock and farm products that might be of service were carried off, the rest being wantonly destroyed.

Chosen President in 1800.

When Jefferson resigned from the Washington cabinet in 1793 he returned to Monticello to enjoy a retirement which he intended should last many years. But this was not to be. He was elected vice president in 1796, and in 1800 he was chosen president.

In March, 1800, Jefferson, after a nearly continuous public service of forty-four years, retired to Monticello and to private life, but he was so seriously impoverished that he was not sure of being allowed to leave Washington without arrest by his creditors, but this, fortunately, he was able to prevent. Toward the close of his life, however, he became distressingly embarrassed in his circumstances. In 1814 he sold his library to congress for $23,000, but through indorsing a note for a friend he was completely ruined and was in danger of being compelled to surrender Monticello and seek shelter for his last days in another abode. But wealthy friends came to his assistance with a considerable sum of money.

"No cent of this," he wrote, "is wrung from the taxpayer. It is the pure and unsolicited offering of love." In the last seventeen years of his life Jefferson lived like a patriarch among his admiring friends. "The Sage of Monticello" was the most prominent man in private life in the country. Even to the year of his death he was a great moral force in the land. As the former president, the purchaser of Louisiana, the chastiser of the Barbary pirates, the founder of the University of Virginia, as the scholar, the philosopher and the savant, he was known to the world over.

TREMONT, KERN PARK, ARLETA

Society of the Laurelwood Congregational church gave a birthday surprise to Mrs. W. A. Pratton at Lucky Cottage. The room was profusely decorated in white and green. The ladies showered Mrs. Pratton with handkerchiefs—handkerchiefs tatted, embroidered, crocheted, ready-made—all sorts, a lovely lot, to express their congratulations. Refreshments of fruit salad with whipped cream and cake were the concluding feature of a very pleasant afternoon. Out-of-the-community guests were Mrs. Sarah Robertson of East Madison Street, and Mrs. Garner of Westmoreland.

Saturday afternoon, May 13, the Laurelwood Congregational ladies gave a farewell surprise on Mrs. Gruber at the home of Mrs. Grace Lawrence, on 44th Ave. S. E. Mrs. Gruber will shortly leave for Butte, Mont., to join her husband who is engaged in business there. As a token of their esteem and good wishes, the Aid Society presented Mrs. Gruber with a piece of silverware. Fruit-punch and cake were served during the closing hour of the function.

Mrs. Walter Hoge from the Sunnyside Congregational church spoke at the Laurelwood Congregational church Sunday, May 7. Mrs. Hoge is the President of the Oregon Woman's Board of Missions for the Pacific, in the Congregational church. In her talk she took the audience on a trip around the world, stopping at each station where there are missionaries. This included points in China, Japan, India, Turkey, etc.

At the Laurelwood Congregational Church Mother's Day was observed last Sunday. The church was decorated with purple iris and yellow Scotch broom and pink and white carnations. A very pretty feature of the Sunday School was the giving of little white bouquets to each child present.

A Lecture on the work of the Forest Ranger, illustrated with slides, will be given at 8 o'clock, Friday evening, May 26, at the Arleta Library by Mr. Wiesendanger, who is connected with the service. It will be free.
