What becomes of the old idea that our taxes for carrying on the government should be raised by a duty on imports, in short lay the burdens on consumers irrespective of their ability to pay. One of the ablest of the Republican, John Sherman, in 1882 said:

"The public mind is not yet prepared to apply the key to a genuine revenue reform. A few years of further experience will convince the whole body of our people that a system of national taxes which rests the whole burden of taxation on consumption and not one cent on property or incomes is intrinsically unjust. While the expenses of the National Government are largely caused by the protection of property, it is but right to require property to contribute to their payment. It will not do to say that each person consumes in proportion to his means. This is not true. Everyone must see that the consumption of the rich does not bear the same relation to the consumption of the poor as the income of the one does to the wages of the other. . . . As wealth accumulates, this injustice in the fundamental basis of our system will be felt and forced upon the attention of Congress."
