Inculcating the Spirit.

It was holiday week, but a mother and child had managed somehow to get a whole seat on the car. Suddenly the little girl slid off the seat, and facing her mother, cried out, with anguish in her childish voice: "Oh mother, I forgot to git anything fer teacher."

"Well, what uv it?" the mother answered tartly. "She didn't git nuthin' fer you," and she sat the child down hard on the seat, partly to keep the woman in the aisle from taking any privileges, and partly, perhaps to impress on the child the Christmas spirit -us she saw it.

Stanfield's business success has not been paved with roses. When his where actual poverty was faced. The mother still living and proud of her son, was a woman of extraordinary character, a native of Oregon. She wanted to have young Robert qualify for a schoolteacher, but the grim neces-Last Monday evening a Laymen's sities of their condition pulled him at once into the harness as a breadwinner. into the business-both cattle and sheep. Of course he started on a small scale.

With his father's experience still in his mind and with his own shrewd and sheep business at that time had never sunk to a lower point in Oregon. But Stanfield had a vision and fore-Institute sight and plenty of nerve. He was not only a sheep raiser and dealer; he was a marketer to establish more favorable transportation facilities for the producer. At that time no mutton sheep was marketed in the Mississippi Valley by Oregon growers. Also the wool of Oregon was sold at no primary market. What the Oregon producer got out of the final low price was mighty little. The fact that he owed money on which he was paying high rates of interestusually kept him tied up so he couldn't get out of the business and from bad conditions were getting worse.

The wool sold was marketed at a great disadvantage to the producer. Buyers from Boston would visit the state at specified dates. The wool growers were there knowing that their notes were past due and feeling they were up against a shell-game so far as selling was concerned. Under the guise of sealed bids the wool was sold. The grower simply had to take what the buyer offered. If he refused to accept the sealed bid, he was practically boyabsolute ruin.

Stanfield grasped the, problem, conceived the remedies and actually has succeeded in carrying them into effect, thereby revolutionizing the marketing of sheep in Oregon and to a great extent the breeding. He visited Chicago and observed the age and conditions of lamb or mutton marketed to the best of advantage. He also familiarized himself with the requirements of the woolen manufacturers.

It was one of the proudest days of his life when he took a train load of Oregon lambs to Chicago. It was the first me Oregon mutton had been marketed I've often heard my brother talk about finance the purchases. But his character was beginning to be well established, and he managed to borrow enough. The venture was the success it deserved to be. A new day had dawned for the Oregon sheep man.

From that start has developed the result that practically all Oregon mutton is marketed as lamb, and marketed at primary markets such as Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha and North Portland. The sheep producer has on an average received twice the price for the mutton that he formerly obtained when general market prices were the same. And the lamb he marketed cost him far less. Reduced cost and double return-the direct product of the thinking, initiative, courage, business sagacity and character of one man. On the wool end of it he met similar success, but not without a bitter struggle.

Mr. Stanfield with much opposition from the wool brokers finally had acquired the confidence of several Portland bankers with whom he was using a considerable line of credit and he finally interested them to establish a warehouse in Portland. This finally resulted in the founding of the Columbia Basin Wool Warehouse Co. quickly house Co. two concerns which this last sold in excess of 16,000,000 pounds of wool and the growers got the full benefit. Over $7,000,000 was actually loaned p. m. Sunday School meets at 3:00 food characteristic to each nationality J. E. Glover, Supt., J. Glover, Sec. could be purchased in the same room.

Mr. Stanfield's money and vigorous leadership with Portland triends sub scribed stock to take over the old Sellwood Mohair mill.

Now as to the wool stored in Portland when the Nation went to war. If this wool had been in the hands of brokers Stanfield and other wool owners offered all the wool they had in storage at once to the government, at the market price government might fix. The government did not accept the offer, as it did At an executive committee meeting of not want the raw wool but the finished largest owner of the stored wool. Mr. Stanfield has fought for and obtained favorable railroad rates in marketing the Oregon live-stock and secured the enactment of legislation to improve the conditions of transporting the same. He has set up scouring mills, and assisted enterprises in various towns in Eastern Oregon. He does not speculate or gamble, but anything he owns, is for sale at the market price. He does not believe in sharp dealings and always has a soft spot for the under dog.

These are the facts about the man who is now accused of being a profiteer instead of a patriot .- Oregon Voter March 23, 1918. Paid Adv. Stanfield for Senator League, 203 N. W. Bank Bldg., Portland.

War and Literature.

It is customary to associate war with the development of intellect. But as respects the inspiration of the Napoleonic wars, they were preceded as well as followed by a burst of French literary activity. What were the special war influences that affect Shakespeare? If the theory is sound the present greatest of all wars should prepare us for super-Shakespeares and super-An' all us other children, when our Darwins. But in fact the lifetime of most men of genius is long enough to comprehend at least one great war. And making allowances for the briefer span of a Keats or Shelley, is it not logical to conclude that the relation of genius to war is less one of cause than of coincidence?-New York World.

Smoking Out Slackers.

The papers are telling of a western Kansas pastor who has hit upon the proper way to smoke out the slackers. In one of the recent war fund drives a meeting was held at which the pastor rose and said: "We are assuming that all of you are Americans, otherwise you would not be at this meeting. We assume that all Americans stand back of the boys who are fighting for us. Now we are not going to ask how many of you will give to this fund. All we want to know is how many are not going to give. All those who are not going to give anything will please stand up." You know the rest.—Kansas City Star.
