

Plan Your War Garden Now, Save Time and Money.

HELP INCREASE OUR EXPORT FOOD STOCKS

N CITY and country more war gardens are needed this year than ever before. Patriotism prompted 2,000,000 Americans to plant gardens last year, according to estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture. Transportation facilities of the nation will be strained this year hauling munitions of war and foods for the Allies. The surplus food created by home gardens will help in the railroad problem. And the nation will eat less of the goods we must export—wheat, meat, fats and sugar. Every boy and girl that helps with the garden is helping win the war. Leaflets of instruction in garden making may be secured from the Department of Agriculture at Washington, upon request, without charge.

SUGGESTIONS FOR SECOND PLANTING

So many people plant everything once in the spring and let that end it, not realizing that they can just as well plant their garden all over again, as the early crop matures, and have nice, fresh vegetables in midsummer and in the fall in this climate. Now is the time to reseed all early spring vegetables which you want to continue to have fresh in your gardens after those you have growing now are gone. The belated rain will surely come before long, and the shortage in the early crops makes it that much more essential to plant again.

Here are some varieties of early crops which should have matured now (except beans) with suggestions in regard to a new planting of each at this time.

Early peas are ready for use now, and the crop is cut short by the ravages of the aphid and the dry weather. A second sowing will insure a crop for canning. Be sure to select seed of varieties described as "hardy," or of strong, robust growth, as it is harder to grow peas in hot weather than other vegetables. Plant them in rich soil in the coolest part of the garden, if possible, where they will be shaded from the hottest afternoon sun; do not manure them, but irrigate them occasionally, as needed, and you can have delicious green peas all summer.

It is very little work to plant a row of onion sets now along by your cabbage, tomatoes, etc. They will be pulled and eaten before your fall vegetables need the room, and your seed onions will not be ready for thinning for some time yet. When they are, you will have them to use for green onions.

Spinach is a spring crop and a fall crop, because spring and fall give the cool, moist temperature it needs to come to perfection. What was sown last spring should all be cut before hot weather, as they are apt to become tough and stringy unless planted in a partially shaded and damp location.

Swiss chard is just maturing and may be made to last a long time by picking the large bottom leaves and letting the tops grow. Remember that the big white mid-rib is fine cut out of the green leaf, and prepared like asparagus for one meal, the leaf part being used for "greens" for the next. In order to keep the plants tender and crisp they must be well watered and fertilized, and shaded if possible.

You should surely plant more sweet corn at this time, so as to have it maturing in succession. Golden Bantam is probably the most delicious, but the ears are small and it is not a heavy yielder. Portland Market, while a dwarf corn, has ears often a foot long, and is very highly recommended as to quality. The Ever green corn is the heaviest producer, but not so sweet.

In this climate we may keep planting lettuce in succession and have it in our own garden practically the year round, instead of paying five cents to ten cents per head for it on the market. It matures from 40 to 60 days after it is planted.

Gray mules are wanted for army work in France because of their low visibility. The voltage of a gray mule is as great as that of a black or bay one, however.

The American youngster named William runs the gauntlet of many nicknames, but it'll never be Wilhelm without a fight.

An optimist is a man who hopes that one of the Kaiser's six sons will some day accidentally be walking in the path of an ally's shell.

It is claimed that the Missouri army mule doesn't take kindly to gas masks. But it is much safer to hobble his heels than his heels.

Some idea of the size of our army is afforded by the statement that there are more than 100,000 Smiths in it.

We can't win the war by blinding ourselves to our own blunders.

The American telephone girl is making an impression in France. It is said to remind the troops forcibly of home when the old familiar "Line's busy" bursts on the startled ear in native American.

Poulterers are conducting an agitation to change the name of the guinea hen. That's been done already—they call her "pheasant" on some bills of fare.

A food economist says "buy your winter eggs now." What is the use when the cold storage war will give us this spring's eggs next winter anyway?

Death's Terrible Toll.
At a moderate calculation there were sent into eternity during the Civil war more than a million of men, who left home in the prime of life and in health and in strength.

Only 400,000 immigrants were admitted into this country last year; 1,400,000 arrived in 1916.

HIS LAST SALUTE

Gen. Grant's Pathetic Farewell to the Brave Men Who Saved the Union.

THE magnanimity of General Grant's soul will live forever. Recently the question was put to His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons, "What is civilized warfare?" Immediately came the reply: "The war between the States." And then the aged prelate added "Suppose General Grant had compelled General Lee and the captive Southerners to have gone to Washington and built the Union a triumphal arch, what would the world have thought? And yet, that was exactly what happened to the Jews at the fall of Jerusalem which Titus' arch commemorates."

When in the spring of 1884 the veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic knew their beloved chieftain was mortally ill, the soldiers, one and all, felt it would be a great privilege if once again they might see Grant's face. They wished to pay him some homage of sympathy, since "A rose to the living is more than countless wreaths to the dead."

This expression of love materialized in a plan to march by his home, on Memorial day, as General Grant was then in New York city. Early on the morning of May 30 these old soldiers were awake, burning accoutrements and medals of honor; unfurling old battle flags.

The quick ear of Grant heard commotion in the street. His voice that had cheered on the Boys in Blue at Statue of General Grant, in Lincoln Park, Chicago.

Vicksburg and Corinth, was now, due to his malady, unable to even ask for a cup of cold water, yet there are certain sounds which to a soldier need no interpretation; and quick as lightning Grant recognized the heavy moving step of columns falling in. He arose feebly and tottered toward the window. Notes of martial music floated out on the spring air—"Yankee Doodle," "America," "The Star-Spangled Banner," "Marching Through Georgia."

The present fades from view—the dying general sees again the smoke of Shiloh, the charge at Chattanooga, the white flag of Lee at Appomattox! Tears come coursing down his cheeks as with upturned faces and uncovered heads he watches his old veterans file by.

Grant slowly lifts his hand in salute. It is his farewell forever to the army that had saved the Union.

All present realized that ere another Memorial day dawned Grant would be numbered among the nation's immortal dead.

Germany had a national debt of five billion marks when she began the war. Editor George Bernhard of the Berlin Vossische Zeitung says that at the end of the war Germany will be confronted with a debt of one hundred and fifty billion marks. The total of Germany's national wealth is four hundred billion marks, a large part of which is state and communal property, and Editor Bernhard calculates that after the war fourteen billion marks annually will have to be raised by taxation, which will necessitate the levying on large fortunes of a tax of 50 per cent. He declares that this will not be a safe tax from an economic standpoint. Germany should have thought of that before she forced the war.

A California lady is asking for a divorce and $100 a month because her husband broke her nose. The California gentleman is a peculiar guy, if he doesn't know better than to tamper with his wife's physiognomy in any such way as that. He ought to pay the $100 a month and furnish the powder, too.
