FAIRS IN WAR TIME

With circuses and carnivals traveling over the country to furnish popular amusement, what is to be the fate of the country fairs and of the Soil Products Show in Portland? So far not a sound has been heard as to plans for the fall exhibitions. If the railroads of the country can supply transportation for circuses and carnivals, certainly there would be no objection to the gathering of producers even if they required a few freight cars for their exhibits and a few coaches for their families.

Canada has been in the war four times as long as we have. Nevertheless, Canada has not fairs on the nonessential list. She does not merely tolerate them, but spends government money liberally to promote their continued success. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture for the Province of Alberta, says that Alberta is officially spending $125,000 a year on its eighty fairs, and the Dominion Government is also subsidizing the principal shows in all the provinces.

What do other nations think about fairs in war time? We cannot expect shows to be held directly in the vortex of the European struggle. However, the second annual fair of Holland's industry was held at Utrecht early this spring, and it was a big success. War is war, but we cannot stop showing, buying and selling.

The fair, historically, was a market. With the growth of cities in civilized lands, marketing has centered in the cities. Nevertheless, the fair has continued as a market for the rural population. And there are millions of Americans whose one chance to see the outside world is to have a sample of it brought to their neighborhood yearly; whose one opportunity to compare their methods with those of others and to learn new things in the most vivid, direct and unforgettable way is to attend the state or county fair or special exhibitions.

Canada boasts the largest show on the continent. The Toronto Exposition has between two and three million dollars invested, and an annual attendance of about 1,000,000 people. This is entirely a municipal enterprise.

The biggest fairs in the United States are Minnesota first, Iowa second, Illinois third; then in approximate order: Texas, Michigan, Nebraska, Indiana, Nevada, Ohio, Kentucky and New York. Oregon comes well down the list. Not only these, but most of the large fairs are in state ownership, in view of which fact it would seem obvious that the Federal Government should encourage and aid them. Minnesota State Fair, the champion of them all, has about $1,750,000 invested in grounds and equipment and an annual attendance around 400,000 people. The New York State Fair began to forge ahead under the administration of Governor Hughs, who saw its value and favored the appropriation of something like $2,000,000 for permanent buildings and equipment.

Here are a few interesting facts about fairs:

There are no fairs of consequence in sections of poor agriculture. Good shows and good farming are always found together.

The connection between fair headquarters and the food-producing center of the country is too significant to be missed.

The fair is so widely known in America that hardly anybody knows anything about it. It is as common as the climate and as little understood. Everybody knows something about his own show and practically nothing about the other fellow's.

More than 1600 fairs are held in the United States every year. About 32,000,000 people, or almost one out of three of the total population, attend American fairs every year.

Illinois and Ohio took the lead in the modern movement for permanent improvements on fair premises. They were followed by Iowa and then by Minnesota. This indicates that the center of fair gravity is in the Corn Belt.

The fairs cost $17,000,000 a year to operate, or an average of $10,625 each. About all the money that comes in is spent on the show. Profits are rare.

Do fairs promote agriculture? Well, the manufacturers and some farmers of New England have within two years staked over $700,000 on the affirmative answer. New England used to produce all her food; then she drifted into manufacture and is now producing about one-quarter of what she consumes. The cost of living is high, and this makes wages high, which puts New England manufacturers at a disadvantage in competing with the lower-wage, cheaper-food industry of the well-farmed Middle West. So a plan was worked out to develop a new agriculture, and the fair was given a prominent place in the plan.

The Department of Agriculture has a gold mine of useful facts which should be made available at the more important shows. The Department woke up in 1917 and began to circulate its hoarded knowledge, making exhibits at thirty-seven fairs or shows in fifteen states.

The exhibits of the Department include the work of the Weather Bureau, Bureau of Animal Industry, Bureau of Plant Industry, Forest Service, Bureau of Chemistry, Bureau of Soils, Bureau of Entomology, Bureau of Biological Survey, States Relations Service; Office of Public Roads and Rural Engineering, Bureau of Markets, and a brand-new series of exhibits covering conservation of food, including canning and drying, methods of food storage, meat production and conservation, handling food for market and the art of cooking.

Why not develop a real soil products show in Portland?

THE PATRIOTISM OF WAR SAVINGS

Speaking before the National Council of Education on "The Patriotism of War Savings," S. W. Straus, president of the American Society for Thrift, said, in part:

"America today stands in a position in which all her economic problems must be solved through thrift.

"Whether we consider plans for the successful defeat of those sinister forces that are pounding at the very foundations of civilization, or whether we have in mind the smallest details of home and business routine, the answer remains the same.

"And unless America can learn the full and solemn truth of these facts—unless our people gain a deep, sincere appreciation of the absolute necessity for thrift, we cannot hope to hold the proud position we occupy as the flag bearer of nations—the leader in the fight for the lofty ideals of human betterment.

"There never can come a time in our National life when thrift will not be a necessity. It is as vital to our success in winning this war as powder and steel. And in that critical period of readjustment which will come with the beginning of peace, thrift will be just as necessary. Millions of men will come back from the fighting front prepared again to take up the occupation of peace. The acute scarcity of labor will be at an end. The pressing demand for war supplies will be over. The inflation that now exists will subside rapidly. In this readjustment there will be no need for thrift and economy to preserve the equilibrium. Living conditions will be revolutionized over night, as it were. Gone will be the days of abnormal wages. Merchants will find the values of their stocks suddenly depreciated. It will be a period of acute readjustment, and only through practices of thrift will the economic effects of the shock be tempered."

Notice of Sheriff's Sale

In the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for Multnomah County. In re: Estate of T. M. Murburt, deceased. H. Cleveland Plunkett, vs. E. W. Roder, Daniel Rehm, Executor of the Estate of T. M. Murburt, Dec'd, in the State of Illinois; P. W. Horsch, Mrs. D. R. Kelly and Eva L. Matthews, Executrix with the Will annexed of the Estate of T. M. Murburt, Dec'd, within the State of Oregon, Defendants.

By virtue of an execution, judgment order, decree and order of sale issued out of the above entitled Court in the above entitled cause, to me directed and dated the 26th day of April, 1918, upon a judgment rendered and entered in said Court on the 23rd day of April, 1918 in favor of H. Cleveland Plunkett and against E. W. Roder defendant for the sum of $25.30 with interest at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from the 23rd day of April, 1918 and the further sum of $30.00 with interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum from the 23rd day of April, 1918, and for the further sum of $23.30 costs and disbursements and the costs of and upon this writ commanding me to make sale of the following described real property to-wit:

Lots Eighteen (18), Nineteen (19) and Twenty (20) of Block Seventeen (17), East St. Johns, in Multnomah County, Oregon, now within the corporate limits of the City of Portland.

Now Therefore, by virtue of said execution, judgment order, decree and order of sale and in compliance with the commands of said writ, I will, on Monday the 16th day of July, 1918, at 10 o'clock A. M., at the east front door of the County Court House in Portland, Multnomah County, Oregon, sell at public auction (subject to redemption), to the highest bidder for cash in hand, all the right, title and interest which the within named defendants and each and all of them in the above entitled suit had on the 2nd day of March, 1918, the date of the mortgage herein foreclosed or since that date had in and to the above described property or any part thereof, to satisfy said execution, judgment order and decree, interest, costs and accruing costs.

T. M. MURBURT Sheriff of Multnomah County, Oregon. Dated this 26th day of April, 1918.

PATRIOT DOLLARS

All the dollars in the world cannot buy victory. Victory is not purchasable—it is won. Dollars can work for victory only in so far as they are converted into labor and materials. A dollar hoarded is a slacker; a dollar wasted is a traitor; a dollar saved is a patriot, doubly so when loaned to the Government.

A hoarded dollar represents idle power; a wasted dollar represents wasted power; a dollar saved represents power saved. Loaned to your Government, it represents power, labor, and materials in action, on the firing line, over the top. And more—it represents reserve power, energy stored, purchasing power conserved for its owner.
