ple and beautiful beliefs that have at- place. tached themselves to the midwinter festival and which generally pass now under the name of "Christmas myths." It is related that St. Winnifred, a great Christian missionary, began cutting Christian missionary, began cutting for all long-distance calls whether down a "sacred" oak which had been the individual call is reached or not, the object of worship by the northern pagans whom he was seeking to lead aright. While he was hewing down the huge tree it was blasted by a sudden whirlwind. Close beside it was a young fir tree, which was not harmed either by the whirlwind or by the fall of the giant oak. Then St. Winnifred is reported to have spoken as follows

"This little tree, a young child of the forest, shall be your holy tree tonight. It is the wood of peace, for your homes are built of it. It is the sign of an endless life, for its leaves are always green. See how it points toward heaven! Let this be called the tree of the Christ Child. Gather about it; not in the wild woods, but in your homes; there it will shelter no deeds of blood, but loving gifts and acts of kindness."

The fir tree, the common evergreen of the northern regions, became the holy tree of the converted pagans, and in its honor or in memory of the thoughts it stood for they decorated it with lights and gifts at Christmas.

Without the slightest fear; She felt no wild, glad tremor, though She knew he lingared near; She sat there calm and unafraid, And sleepily he yawned, for they'd Been married for a year.

There once was a doll on a Christmas Who sighed to the angel that hung "Oh, how I do wish they would keep A sweet little, neat little girl to love;

"A dear little mother to curl my locks, To rock me to sleep, and to wake me To dress me in cute little gowns and frocks.

And feed me with milk from her

A kind little mother, who'd never say A word that was angry, nor let me fall; Who'd always be ready to let me play With bright little friends who should come to call!"

And, strange though the wonderful fact may be, That little wax doll's little wish came They picked her right off the Christmar And gave her, my dear little girl, to you!

Christmas Is Children's Day

The message of Christmas is love. Its emblem is radiant, thankful, con-tented childhood. Without love and without children there could be no real Christmas. The form might survive but the substance would be lack-

Unhappy must be the adult who cannot make himself a child again in spirit at the Yuletide. For Christmas is the universal children's day. Men and women are superfluous except as they make themselves partners with those whom the day glorifies.

Let us, then, lay aside the affectation and arrogance of manhood and womanhood and be children again. Let us adopt their point of view and put ourselves in their places-in the places of these sons and daughters of ours and of the sons and daughters of our neighbors. It was only a year or two ago, as it seems, when we hung our well-worn stockings in a row along the mantel shelf, while our fathers and mothers looked on with unfelgned pleasure at the innocent confidence we showed in what the morrow would bring forth.

Even as you and I. It all comes back in a flood of memories. Life was simpler then. Our destres were less pretentious than those our children voice now. Modest remembrances they were that bulged toe and beel of the stockings mother knit.

Life and its circumstances change, but the essence of Christmas never. The same happy childhood, the same restlessness, the same snaff-like creeping of time as the holiday approaches. The same parenthood, too-the same planning across the reading table after the boys and girls are abed, the same loving consideration of what this or that child most desires and how far the family purse can properly be stretched to permit some further pur-
