"The Peak of the Load," or "The Waiting Month on the Hilltop From the Entrance of the Stars and Stripes to the Second Victory on the Marne," by Mildred Aldrich. The book is a memorable testimony to the rich sympathy between the French people and ourselves.

"Green Valley," by Katherine Reynolds. Never before were the chronicles of a seemingly quiet community related with more sympathy and with more insight into dramatic value revealed in Fanny Foster's keen and sweet kindliness and wholesome philosophy of Grandma Wentworth. This is a lively and exciting affair.

"Civilization and Health," by Woods Hutchinson, M. D. With an incomparable union of authority and freshness, Dr. Hutchinson writes on some of the more important topics pertaining to the health of men and women living under the conditions of modern life. Among the topics which and the danger of patent medicine.
