Wednesday evening, the 8th the eighth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. F. Coulter, 5936 92nd street was commemorated by a gathering of about 20 people, in the presence of whom the happy couple were remarried according to an original ceremony conducted by Rev. J. F. Gormley of Woodmere. Mrs. Gertie Wilson had decorated the rooms with ferns and cedar, with pink and white roses for the color touch. The "bride" was gowned in pearl gray crepe de chene and carried a bouquet of pink and white roses veiled with baby breath and maiden-hair fern. Delicious refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

The whole affair was so carefully planned that it came as a complete surprise to Mrs. Coulter.

Dr. Leigh Colvin, the prohibition candidate for Vice-President, will speak at the Evangelical Church of Lents, Sunday, September 12, at 2:30 P. M. The public is urged to attend this meeting.

Lloyd Arnett of Kern Park spent the week end with Hugh Zimmerman of Gobel.

THAT LITTLE TOWN.

It is, after all, the little things that appeal to many of us. Lilliput has a greater charm than Brobdingnag. Many men prefer the little woman to Giantess Blunderbore. We have a feeling that the old saying "The most precious goods come in the smallest packages" must have a basis of truth. We admire and marvel at the great works of man, but are willing to go home to the little and the concrete. Many of us weary at the bigness and bustle, unceasing strife and confusion of a great city; it "gets on our nerves." It would seem a joy to live where life is more leisurely, and one is not an unconsidered atom in a vast aggregate of humanity, says Detroit Free Press. It is possible to appreciate the feeling of the man who turned away from Niagara, saying, "It is too overwhelming," but said of a shallow stream rippling over a rocky shelf, "I love this! I can get my arms around it." This is not disparaging the big city, which has its advantages, its fellowships and its myriad opportunities. It is an appreciation of its opposite, those little places where people have all the time there is, where as Jerome puts it, "people do not live like shopkeepers."

The case in which a man was swindled out of $12,000 by impostors pretending to be the kidnapers of his child, and who saw in his holding off the police in his frantic eagerness to recover the baby an easy way to gouge him, is not only a peculiarly despicable crime, but a very dangerous one in view of the suggestion it gives similar scoundrels, says Baltimore American. One cannot blame parents for taking any means of recovering their stolen children, but this trading on their fears puts the whole community at the mercy of the worst class of bandits, and adds another to the reasons why no mercy should be shown by the law to kidnapers once they are in its toils.

The eagle always appealed to the American Indians, who regarded it with a kind of superstitious awe. They used the feathers for religious ceremonies and also for the ornamentation of their warriors. If an Indian scalped his enemy on the battlefield he was permitted to wear two eagle feathers, and if he captured his foe the reward was five feathers for his bonnet. Because of this reverence on the part of the native American and the fact that the eagle is used as the national emblem, steps should be taken to protect this great bird.

The bolsheviks are reported as torturing prisoners by cutting off hands and gouging out eyes, much to the horror of a civilized world that likely will be expected later calmly to watch Lenin and Trotsky living in retired ease and security at some Doorn or Amerongen.

A military prisoner in Mexico got permission to visit his sick mother under guard, and escaped. The Mexican authorities, however remiss, still score over ours, since sick mothers are both more plausible and more human than buried treasures.

The shorter the city day, the longer farm day will be needed to feed the increasing crowds who burn daylight in the cities. Old Reuben Hicks is going to rise some day and clip the rations of the town man who loaf on the job.

The king and queen of Roumania will not come to this country until after the election. Queen Marie thinks the American mind will be concentrated on the next president to such an extent that queens will not be trumps.

DR. T. L. PERKINS MAKES HIS ANNOUNCEMENT FOR CANDIDATE FOR CITY COMMISSIONER

In making my announcement as a candidate for City Commissioner at the coming election to be held on November 2, 1920, I feel that it is incumbent upon me to review my past record as a public official, which I believe the public should be familiar with at this time.

Having served in the thirteenth and fifteenth sessions of the Oregon State Legislature as State Senator from this district, I was chairman of the ways and means committee of the thirteenth session and assisted in putting over the first Good Roads law; the County Bonding Act, which gave us the Columbia Highway; the Enabling Act, that put the Interstate Bridge across the Columbia River; the Compensation Act; the Widows' Pension Act; and assisted in creating the commission which regulated the working hours of women; the Tenure of Office of Teachers Act; and in the fifteenth session I was chairman of assessment and taxation, in which session I assisted in passing the present tax law, with the divided payments.

In 1918, I was elected to the office of City Commissioner, to fill the unexpired term of Mayor Baker and during which term I served as Commissioner of Finance. During my service with the city I was instrumental in systematizing the affairs in each bureau and placing competent men in charge; this resulted in saving quite a considerable sum of money to the taxpayers.

I believe that the charter should be amended as the city has outgrown it, and it has passed its usefulness, so far as it pertains to the financial affairs.

One of the greatest problems which the City Commission will be called upon to assist in solving in the immediate future, is that of tourist travel. There should be established in Portland a high-class information bureau where information of all kinds can be obtained by the tourist. We should also have a suitable parking and camping sites where the motorists can have wood, water, lights and comfort stations. With this innovation — and which is at the present time absolutely necessary — Portland could be made the greatest tourist terminal on the Pacific Coast, and would be one of Portland's best assets.

I have been a resident of Portland for 30 years, a taxpayer, a stockholder in one of the city's growing industries, and have practiced my profession for the last 20 years.

If I am elected, I will conduct the office on strictly business lines — economy and efficiency and courteous treatment to everyone at all times.

T. L. PERKINS.

UNAVOIDABLY DELAYED

The Mt. Scott Herald is unavoidably delayed a few hours this week on account of "machine trouble." The Herald's publisher had not truly realized the importance of this newspaper to the community until he began to answer the numerous inquiries by phone and personal calls—"Why didn't I get my paper this week?" If some of our merchants could be made to realize this condition and attest more faith in the mutual benefit to be derived by investment in these columns—thus enabling the publisher to print a bigger and better newspaper—it would prove of untold advantage to all concerned.

THE LATCHSTRING IS OUT

By typographical error of the writer, last issue, the Herald inferred that candidates were not welcome to call at this office—the word "candidate" having been supplied for "politician." All candidates are welcome to visit this discriminator of local news for the Mt. Scott district, irrespective of party affiliations, sex, color of hair, infirmities or past condition of servitude. The political editor of the Herald, a comparative stranger in this bailiwick, is anxious to meet, greet and give the glad hand to all aspirants for official preferment—that he may be able to form some sort of an intelligent opinion of their fitness for office. While personal appearance does not always insure capability, integrity and other virtues that tend to make a competent "servant of the people"—it helps some.

DELUGE OF POLITICAL DEMOCRATIC ORATORY

Portland is in for a deluge of political oratory, beginning at the close of the present week.

D. Leigh Colvin, candidate for vice president on the prohibition ticket, will address a meeting Saturday evening in Central Library; at Evangelical church at Lents, Sunday at 2:30 p. m., and at First Methodist church Sunday evening.

Governor James M. Cox, democratic candidate for president, is expected to speak at the auditorium in Portland, Monday noon.

EVANGELICAL CHURCH NOTES.

We are glad to notice an increase in the attendance at the different services with the beginning of the fall season.

We desire the people of Lents who are not attending services elsewhere to feel at home with us.

The pastor is planning special services to commence October 10. Mr. L. M. Bain, of Tacoma, Wash., will have charge of the song service.

Thursday evening, September 16, Rev. Jacob Stoeker of the Clay street church will preach for us, the occasion being the Second Quarterly Conference.
