CARDINAL MISTAKE.

The cardinal mistake made by those who are prejudiced against organized labor is that they regard organized workers as men set apart from other Americans. The same mistake is made by some organized labor leaders, who try to differentiate between their men and other Americans. There cannot be two sets of rights for American citizens. Americans have equal rights, in or out of labor organizations, political organizations or religious organizations. Any attempt to make distinctions between the rights of American citizens is a blow at the integrity of the United States as a nation, says Washington Post. It must fail, because the nation has made up its mind to live and deal out equal justice to all its citizens, whether they like it or not. Any injustice to the Americans in the ranks of organized labor is an injustice to the public. The public is bound to remove this injustice, and it will do so if the truth is brought before it. The people are honest and generous; and they are also incapable of being terrorized. They will not knowingly do injustice, nor will they long tolerate injustice.

An eminent French professor has come out in favor of the adoption of English as a world language. He says that both the German and French have lost their commanding positions through the war, that the business of the world is now chiefly done through the English tongue, says Los Angeles Times. It is a sort of compromise between the Latin and Germanic languages and has perhaps a literature that in character and extent equals its combined rivals. The professor might have added that it also possesses a copious and expressive annexation of slang. If English is adopted as the universal language, some of us may take up the idea of achieving it.

Philadelphia public schools have no spelling books. And spelling books have been dropped, say educators, because they start with "cat" and "rat," and include similar words seldom used in correspondence and business. Until a spelling book has been compiled that uses the words that are most frequently used in business and private correspondence, Louis Nusbbaum, associate superintendent of public schools, announces that public schools there will compile their own lists of words. The spelling vocabulary taught an average public school pupil is 2,500 words. This is 500 more than was found in an investigation of words in 100,000 business and personal letters.

The German chancellor denies that Germany influenced Austria to begin the great World war. But he does not explain how Germany came to take the war over and run it as her own particular enterprise with Austria as an entirely subordinate factor.

We are not so much concerned now about what the idle rich are doing, for they are worth nothing to the world anywhere; but we are exceedingly anxious about what the idle poor are not doing, for they are essential to the existence of humanity.

Now that there are evident some honest-to-goodness efforts to reduce prices that are replacing price-juggling the consumer is again beginning to smile in the realization that trade cannot get along without him.

It is to be regretted that in comic opera only does the punishment as a rule fit the crime. It would be much better for the welfare of the community if the idea were borrowed from comic opera by the law.

The Russian soviet wants to study the English proletariat. It will next want to examine the American proletariat, but will encounter a considerable obstacle in the fact that "there ain't no such animal."

The fight on profiteering is now on in earnest. With both public opinion and the law aroused on the subject, it would be strange if no way were found to deal with this preying on human necessity.

An "Intellectual" is a person having a capacity for the higher forms of knowledge; so says the dictionary. There always will be an aristocracy of some kind; and this promises to be the kind.

Some Spanish provinces are under military law. Discontent and disorder are contagious, apparently, in Europe. Even the neutral nations have not escaped the evils of the war atmosphere.

That talk about a big sorghum crop this year also sounds like a return to the simple ways of good old days—and maybe if sugar keeps on in the way it is going we can get used to them.

A Winnipeg man has perfected a device for telling the sex of eggs. That may interest farmers, but the ordinary man would like a device for exact age measurement.

Robert Gordon for Mayor

"Mention of Herbert Gordon for Mayor sounds good to us. Watching his legislative career for two sessions convinces us that as Mayor of Portland he could save the taxpayers from $100,000 to $500,000 a year and at the same time increase governmental efficiency. He is very hard-headed and resourceful and there is nothing of the parlor politician or gassy grandstander about him. That he is progressive is demonstrated by his courage in going ahead with dwelling construction during the pre-war period when practically no other Portlander had faith enough in the city's immediate future to undertake anything of the kind."—Oregon Voter, March 6, '20.
