OUT OF IT.

Did you ever sit down alone, a stranger in a strange town, and wonder what the people you knew were doing back in the place you still felt was home? It is an odd and uncomfortable feeling that comes to human beings now and then that they are "out of things," away from those who know them, those with whom they have been used to visit constantly, away from the bunch. Then did you ever go to some celebration the crowd had planned and have a good, jolly time, the kind of good time people who know each other well can have, and remember that this time some one else was out of it all? The uncomfortable things prick our consciousness so much more than the comfortable. It is so much easier to think of the crowd when one is lonesome than to think of the lonesome one when one is with the crowd—so much easier that the reward is tenfold when one does think of the other chap and writes to tell him about it, and doesn't forget to say: "Everybody missed you."

There is not great danger of bubonic plague gaining any great foothold in this country though cases of it have appeared this year at Pensacola, New Orleans and Galveston. At the same time it is a dread disease for which there is no known cure, and protection comes through preventive measures. The infection is conveyed by fleas escaped from rats brought on ships from Chinese or other ports where the plague is nearly always found. Dr. Victor G. Heiser of New York, America's foremost authority on the disease, says that while there is not much likelihood of an outbreak of the plague, preventive action is always in order and that it is a good time to engage in a rat campaign.

Among the automobile requirements should be one that those learning to drive machines should keep off streets in the busy and crowded business thoroughfares and take to the outlying sections of the city, where traffic is slight and pedestrians and vehicles few, until the operator can properly guide the car, says Baltimore American. Already the casualties and fatalities caused by the learner who rushes in where angels would watch their steps are becoming alarmingly frequent.

Ray Chapman's death from being hit on the head by a pitched ball calls sharply to the attention of sport-loving Americans the very real peril that each man faces as he steps up to the home plate with a bat in his hand to encounter the lightning-like delivery of the modern baseball pitcher. The speed of the pitched ball is so terrific that only the clearest of eyes and the best of nerves enable a man to succeed as a batsman, and sometimes even these fail him.

American boy scouts gave a Wild West show in Paris to thousands of spectators, including many French boys. It must have given a thrill, even to gay Paris, and the French boys will live on in lingering envy of the glorious life, hunting Indians and roping cattle, which is the natural endowment of his American contemporary.

That all-metal airplane is a great success and when mounted with a 160-horsepower motor turns hand-springs, slip-flops—and everything. It was never thought that man could make himself wings out of pig iron that would enable him to give the American eagle a two-mile start in a five-mile race.

Government price experts are predicting a reduction by fall in prices of food and clothing. But the public has heard such optimistic prophecies before and is now reduced to the purely philosophical attitude of hoping for the best, but prepared for the worst.

London reports the appearance of shoes ornamented with feathers. They are probably intended for ladies who were caught in the bird protection movement and agreed not to wear feathers in their hats.

The smash-crash-bang-clash style of music is to be banished from the ball-room floor. How will the people who have been deafened by it hear the softer and gentler strains?

THE FARMER.
A few facts about farms and farmers: Thirty million Americans live on farms. Twenty million more live in communities having a population less than 2,500. Forty per cent of American farms are rented, and most of the owners live in cities and villages, says Knickerbocker Press. More than half of the population of the United States is directly concerned with farming as a means of livelihood. The value of farm property in the United States is conservatively estimated at $61,000,000,000. This is more than the combined capital of all the manufacturing establishments, all the railroads, all the mines and quarries in the country. Farm output in the United States in 1917 reached a total gross value of $16,000,000,000. Increased costs of production, however, left the neat profits only slightly increased. Government appropriations for the department of agriculture have increased from $6,000,000 in 1904 to $68,000,000 in 1918. Most of the increase is being devoted to the support of agricultural colleges, the development and promulgation of improved methods of agriculture and the promotion of agricultural enterprises. Farm indebtedness amounts to $6,000,000,000, an astonishing sum, but only 12 per cent of the value of farm property. Improved methods of farming, better educational advantages, the introduction of improved machinery, better selling methods and home comforts, and the farmer's sounder credit position are all playing an important part in advancing the farmer's situation.

Java the Land of Storms.
If you want to study storms, go to Java. That island owns up to an average of 97 a year, or approximately two a week, the world's record. The good old-fashioned storms of which our forefathers used to tell have apparently vanished into thin air, for England's contribution is but seven in a year. Sumatra stands beside Java with 86 a year; Borneo and the Gold coast have 50 each; Rio de Janeiro, 51; Italy, 38; Buenos Aires, Canada and Austria, 23; coming nearer home, France and south Russia have 16 apiece, Spain and Portugal, 15; Sweden and Finland, 8. East Turkestan gets off easy with a total of none.—London Answers.
