KLAN AND CONSTITUTION

It is the right of all American citizens "peaceably to assemble." There shall be no abridgement of freedom of speech. The constitution of the United States expressly reserves these rights.

The Ku Klux Klan, therefore, has a right to hold meetings, and to say what it pleases about other American citizens who happen to profess other religious beliefs than its members do, or to be of another race or color.

So far, so good for the klan. But when an organization attempts to make life unpleasant in this country for American citizens of other races, colors or religious beliefs than its own, basing its objection to these people specifically on the fact of their difference in race, color or belief, that organization is likely to get into trouble with the same constitution which guarantees its own right of speech and assembly.

The boast of "100 per cent Americanism" made by the klan is absurd. Its principles, as set forth by some leaders, are pretty close to being 100 per cent anti-American.

This country was founded by people seeking religious and political freedom. Its highest law is based on that fact. Any organization endeavoring to make itself a power above that law with the purpose of violating the spirit of American liberty is up against a bigger force than it realizes. —From the Riverside Press, Riverside, Cal.

Short Stories

By George Barnard

There can be nothing really satisfying in being the richest man in the world. With so much poverty around me I should regard the title as something of an accusation. But there must be a certain solemn dignity in being the oldest man in the world. It would be very satisfying to my pride to feel that of the hundreds of millions of people who inhabited the globe when I first saw daylight, all are dead; to feel that the entire world had been depopulated and that I was the sole survivor; the only living recorder of a dead age. A very little of such dignity would, however, be quite enough. There must be pains as well as prizes in the privilege of being chained to earth for a century and more.

It would be interesting to know to whom the distinction belongs. The Paris correspondent of the New York World gives it to one John Krasinski. He is said to be 132 years of age. But if John Krasinski is the rightful owner of the honors in longevity, it can be only because the Yaqui Indians in Mexico have ceased to compete for the title. Some years ago they had two men beside whom John would have felt quite youthful. A history of Mexico, which I have just been reading in manuscript records that on a pastoral visitation of his diocese, the Bishop of Sonora "verified the age of one Lorenzo Buctuamea, who claimed to have 500 descendants." The parish register showed him to be 142. He was the leader of the choir, a distinction to which he would certainly be entitled by right of seniority. The account continues naively: "The priest at the mission then produced Gaspar de los Reyes, who was 151 years old."

General Cornelius Vanderbilt, at a dinner on his yacht Romola, told a war story. "What was true of the civil war will be true of the world war some day," he began. "In a hotel smoking room back in the '90s a number of veterans got into a dispute over a certain battle. The veterans—all men of high rank—argued very turbulently. But a quiet man spoke up and said: 'Gentlemen, I happened to be there at that engagement, and I think I can settle the point at issue.' And settle he did. The hotel proprietor, much impressed, said to him when he got through: 'My dear sir, what may have been your rank in the army?' 'I was a private, sir, a full private,' was the calm reply. A short time afterward the full private asked for his bill, as he was about to depart, but the proprietor said to him: 'Not a penny, sir! Not a penny! You owe me nothing.' 'Why, how is that?' the other demanded in bewilderment. 'I couldn't dream of charging you, sir,' said the proprietor warmly. 'You are the first private I have ever met.'"

NOBODY—ONLY MOTHER

Nobody knows of the stitches it takes To keep the home together; Nobody thinks of our little aches, Nobody—only mother.

Nobody knows what makes work sweet.

And the home so free from bother; Nobody tries all our wants to meet, Nobody—only mother.

Nobody's face with smiles is so bright, Ready to welcome father, When weary and tired he comes at night, Nobody—only mother.

Nobody knows of the worries and cares To keep bright in cloudy weather; By sitting up late and mending tears, Nobody—only mother.

No one so ready our faults to forgive, And make us try to do better, Or teach us how pure lives so live, Nobody—only mother.

Nobody knows how to soothe our pain, That in childhood or later we suffer, And for loving sympathy—still the refrain, There's nobody like our mother. —Selected.

A congressman says our office devil is a fellow who pulls down a good salary whether he earns it or not.

Stand two beautiful women up together and their respective husbands will invariably notice the charms of the other fellow's wife first.

Secrets of GOOD ADVERTISING

SYSTEMATIC PLAN.

One single advertisement does not make a campaign any more than one single cannon shot makes a battle. If you were to read one advertisement by a local dealer and not see another by him for a long time, you would not be much impressed.

Even if he advertised at long intervals, you would not pay much attention to him. But the man who has frequent messages of interest for you gets you into the habit of looking for them.

Following this theory, he advertises systematically. He maps out a definite plan or campaign. His announcements appear at regular and frequent intervals, so you know when to expect them and will, therefore, look for them.

He adopts a style which remains characteristic of all his advertising. Each advertisement has a certain individuality about it, and yet something that identifies it with him.

He may use a peculiar style of illustration throughout his advertising or maintain a uniformity of general appearance that distinguishes it from other advertising at a glance. But whatever its distinctive features may be, he uses them constantly and at regular intervals.
