EDITOR TRIBUNE:—The caitiff who presides over the destinies of the Gazette sends forth another wail in issue of June 17th. He seems incapable of adjusting himself to the inevitable. In his latest wail he writes me down as the recently elected "——," meaning "blank," of course. Now, it will seem to the average mind that, for a "blank," my candidacy and election have caused Mr. Hume an immense amount of worriment, the conclusion to be drawn from which fact is, that he must be a weakling from away back. And then, if I am so inconsiderable a personage as to deserve to be written down a "blank," what could there have been to justify Mr. H. on Tuesday morning following the election in making the streets of his town lurid with profanity and obscenity because of my success? Yet, on that occasion, he vowed that every man who had voted for me was "a thief, a scoundrel and s. of a b." That was the characterization applied to thirteen hundred and fifty-four persons who had cast their ballots for me the day previous, by a conceited, malignant duffer who is to-day unworthy to unlatch the shoestrings of the poorest one among the number. It were base flattery to call such a being a gentleman; and to compare his actions on the occasion named, and m... others that might be named to those of the historic fish woman, would be to insufferably insult the latter.

And Mr. Hume makes profuse promises in his paper that it shall always be his highest aim to elevate the morals of the community and instruct the young in the highest paths of good citizenship.

Let us hope that there will be none, old or young within the range of his influence but will rise superior to his example; but will instinctively recoil from the contemplation of doing as he has done in very many and conspicuous respects.

His repeated assertion that he is an "American citizen," have not covered, and cannot conceal, his un-American conduct. It is American to yield obedience to the will of the majority as expressed by the ballot; it is un-American and unworthy and infamous to enveigh against and assault the voter with blackguard epithets for casting his ballot as suits his ideas of what has been right and expedient to be done. It is un-American and a grievous travesty upon decency for one to insist that his employes shall vote as he does or dictates. These things Mr. Hume has done, which I, in common with all fair-minded people resent. And I fancy that he overestimates the efficacy of his declarations that he hopes such will excuse his despotic and un-American doings and behavior.

J. H. UPTON.

A Portland paper says a Chinese merchant of that city is authority for the statement that within five years' time there will be very few of his countrymen remaining in this state. The extension of the Chinese exclusian law removes the last hope of continuance of profitable business here and the number of Chenese remaining in this city will each year be greatly diminished. It has been learned completely that they are not needed nor desired. In Albany white men can take their place in every thing. They have been crowded out as servants and ywoodsawers and in laundry work are surpassed bywhite people.—Albany Democrat

[Oregonian]

Mr. J. J. Healy, of Alaska, is in the city. He represents a company which is having a steamboat built on the Sound for navigating the Yukon river. It is expected that there will be a line of steamers from the Sound or San Francisco to the mouth of the Yukon next season, and this boat will connect with it and open up the navigation of the great Yukon.

The men who organized the first company for navigating the Columbia became wealthy through their enterprise, and it is probable that large fortunes will be made on the Yukon. There will be no commision to revise freight rates up there, and the company will get the long hall of everything, and there will be a chance to make some profit on the business. The vast territory through which the Yukon runs contains rich mining sections, and the opening of navigation on the upper reaches of that river will enable these to be developed and produce great wealth. The Yukon is 2000 miles long, and for three-fourths of this distance is navigable for steamer, even through the Rocky mountains, which it traverses by a narrow, deep channel without falls or obstructions. It receives many large tributaries and is itself the largest American river flowing into the Pacific. The scenery in the pass through the Rockies is very grand, rivaling that of the Columbia, and the river is also said to furnish salmon almostif not equally as good as those of the Columbia.

[Oregonian.]

Mr. E. Lee, Vancouver, B. C. called at this office yesterday to furnish information asked for in regard to the steamer Beaver, and the chance of her getting to the ChicgagoExposition. He says the Beaver lies on Stanley point, at the right-hand side of the entrance to Vancouver harbor. The machinery is still in the hull, which is left bare at low water. Very little interest was taken in the wreck till the project of taking it to Chicago was broached.

Now there is a day and night watchman at the wreck, and every body wants a bit of old oak or hickory timber for a cane, or somethiny else as a relic of the first steamer that ever ploughed the Pacific ocean. The wreck is owned by a real estate firm at Victoria, and it is rumored that $30,000 will be spent in getting it or portions of it to Chicago. Some of the secret order lodges in Victorie and Vancouver have gold-mounted gavels made from the Beaver, and Mr. Lee says he saw a cane made from an oak rib sell for $75. The whistle of the Beaver, which once echoed across the broad Pacific, from Cape Horn to Hong Kong, is now on the Exposition building at NewWestminster, and the people there will keep it if they can. The bell of the steamer has been recovered by the owners of the wreck. It will be utterly inpossible to take the Beaver to Chicago in the shape of a steamer. Her old machinery,keel and timbers may be taken. Many persons would pay something to see the keel and paddle-wheels of the first steamer that ever floated on the Pacific and did so many years service on its waters.

The reproduction of Columbus's caraval, the Santa Marie, is being built by the Spanish Government at Cadiz. The keel was layed on March 1. The caravel's dimensions are: Length at keel, 62 feet; 4 inches length between perpindiculars, 75 feet five inches, beam, 22 feet; draft, 14 feet 8 inches. Great care is being taken with details, and the instruments and appliances of the time of Columbus will be in their places aboard the caravel. The Pinta and Nina it is announced, are being reproduced by American capital, so visitors to the Exposition will be able to see the Columbus fleet complete. The Spanish Government will provide crews for the the three caravels, dressed as were Columbus's sailors, and the trip across the Atlantic will be made under escort of a Spanish man-of-war. After participating in the naval review in New York harbor the caravels will proceed to Chicago. After the Fair closes they will remain the property of the United States.

The growth and prosperity of the great West are treated in Lippincott's Magazine for June by John J. Ingalls and William F. Sha[rpe]s, and the two combine a story of territorial and national development seldom if ever paralelled in history. The magnitude of the territory of which these articles treat, is not the least among the marvels of this wenderful region. It is shown that the Missippi river has 600 affluents, the course of which is marked upon the maps, and the era of its drainage covers 1,257,548 square miles. The traveler embarking on a steamboat at Pittsburg can sail 4300 miles to Fort Benton, in Montana, and from Minneapolis 2200 miles to Fort Eads, on the Gulf of Mexico. Should he choose to extend his voyage to the head of navigation upon the 45 nagviable tributaries of the great Father of Waters, his journey would exceed 16,000 miles through 23 states and territories of the Union. This stupendous water system extends further into the continent than from New York to Liverpool, and the territory which drains is larger than Central Europe.

One hundred years ago the pioneers of New England descended the Western slopes of the Alleghenies into the valley of Ohio, and disappeared in its awful solitudes. Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis were long after this outposts of civilization, exposed to the firebrand and the tomahawk. From that unsurveyed wilderness in less than a century, 28 states have been admitted into the union, having a combined area of 800,000,000 acres and supporting a population of more than 35,000,000. Though the aggerate wealth of this region is practically beyond computation, an idea of its vastness may be gained from the knowledge that last year the states of the Mississippi valley produced more than three-quarters of the sugar, coal, iron, oats, wheat, cotton, tobacco, lead, hay, lumber, wool, pork, beef, horses and mules of the entire country, together with a large fraction of its gold and silver. Their internal commerce is already greater than that of all foreign commerce of the combined nations of the earth.

And yet the Northwest is to hear from in this wonderful story, and its grand chapter is being unfolded year by year, adding wonder to wonder in the line of what we proudly term development of the councry. If there is anything which may be termed a miracle, it is growth, and this has been wrought out in tne Great West with a power that is, when considered either in detail or as a whole. simply astounding.

Last week Secratary Noble, of the Interior Department, directed that that proportion of the grant to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company lying between Tres Pinos, in San Benito County, and Alcasede, in Fresno County Cal.' be restored to the public domain. These lands were declared forfeited to the United States by the act of September 29, 1890. By this action of Secretary Noble, about 768,000 acres of land in a fruit-growing section will be oponed to public settlement at an early date, the date to be fixed by the local land officers at San Francisco.

Hartford. Conn., June 14.—Harriet Beecher Stowe is 80 years old today. The event was commemorated by a birthday celebration by the pupils and graduates of the Hartford female seminary, which was founded in Hartford by Miss Beecher in 1827. Many friends called to express their good wishes but Mrs. Stowe was not able to see them, as she has for several years been in a feeble condition. Letters and telegrams were recieved from many parts of the country bearing cangratulations.

Austro-Hungary has yeilded to the force of the McKinly Bill, and conclubed a treaty by which we admit free of duty Austro-Hungarian hides, coffee, tea, sugar, and molasses, and that country in return admits our agricultural implements, clocks and watches, cotton manufactures, meat extracts, condensed milk, iron and steel manufactures, resin, tar, parafine, pianos, cottonseed oil, and some 250 other articles at greatly reduced rates of duty.

The Democrats will make a better showing in the legislature, according to the Oregonian's figures, than they have since 1880.

There is [...] some interesting news [from the Behr]ing sea, soon as the poach[ers] are about there now, and [...]ly "in it" and slaughter [...] in prohibited wa[ters]. [The] British Behring sea patr[ol] [...] is now probaly in the sea, c[onsisting of] the Melpomene, Nymphe, [...]hine, and the American [squa]dron consists of the steamer [Y]ankton, Mohican, Adams, Rush, and Bear, with the Ranger to follow.

Their instructions to enforce the modus prohib[iting] sealing in the Behring sea [...] them to sieze any vessel fo[und seal]ing there, without previous notice, and the mere presence of a vessel in the sea, with a sealing outfit is sufficient ca[use] for siezure. All persons on board vessels siezed are to be sent as prisoners with the vessel to suffer the penalty of the law.

Under the [British] law all persons killing or aid[ing an]d abetting in killing [in Behri]ng sea are to be fined £1[00 and] sentenced to imprisoned [at ha]rd labor for six months. The American law provides a fin of $1000 and six month's imprisonment.

As there are some 70 or 80 schooners out for seal, there is likely to be some trouble before long. These schooners have made sure of the sealskins captured along the coast by sending them to Victoria. The total number caught is about 4500. C. D. Ladd of San Francisco, recently purchased 3000 of them paying $12 each. This will give the poachers something to fall back on if their schooners are captured.

The Corwin which went to Behring sea with a scientific corps, also took four native hunters,and will keep an acount of the number of seals shot and the number of wounded that sink or escape.

Sun: The fruit crop this year will be exceedingly light in Coos county, probably not more than supplying the local demand. It is hoped that by anotver year Coos bay will see a fruit cannery established, and a bountiful fruitage may be looked for. This season the trees will revive a healtlier growth and bear larger fruit another year.

In his issue of June 10, editor Hume says, "and believe, to accomplish our purpose, must have the hearty coopeation of our employes who should possess the same political sentiments as ourselves." If this does notmean that he wants no man in his employ who will not vote according to his dictates, what does it mean?

The highest vote in Multnomah county at the recent election was that for sheriff—13,423.

GROWING OLD.

Some day, looking in my mirror,
I'll discover, here and there,
Slowly on my head intruding,
Scattering threads of silver hair;
But I do not think I'll murmur,
And I do not think I'll scold,
And my heart will not be saddened
When I see I'm growing old.

I will make no lamentation
And no tear will dim my eye.
There will be no touch of sadness,
Nor a vain, regretful sigh;
Youth will be a mere remembrance,
Just a story that is told
But I'll not wish to recall it
When I see I'm growing old.

I shall think that, of Life's battle,
Of the hard, relentless grind,
There is less ahead to conquer,
There is more that's left behind.
Nearer, then, my rest from labor
On Life's path so bleak and cold.
So the gray hairs will be welcome
When I see I'm growing old.

—Joseph Bert Smiley.

How She Wrote It.

One of the qualities necessary to success in any line of work is the ability to think and act practically upon the everyday questions of life.

A young woman who had charge of the cataloguing of the accounts of a Philadelphia bank employed as an assistant a girl apparently intelligent and well educated, to whom she gave the necessary directions for the work. One of the instructions was that, while she was to write out the full name where an abbreviation was used, she must never abbreviate a name.

One day the young woman in charge found the following peculiar name and address, neatly written out by the assistant, "Saml. Brown, trustee for George and Minnie Section, Academy of Natural Sciences."

Somewhat surprised at the address, she asked to see the ledger from which it was copied. The ledger read, "Saml. Brown, trustee for Geo. and Min. Section, Academy of Natural Sciences."

The young woman had never studied either geology or mineralogy, but when the matter was explained to her she found that the word "Section" is not always a surname, and that "Geo." may be an abbreviation for something quite different from George.—Youth's Companion.

The Flimflam.

A Customer—Give me a dozen shirts.

Shopkeeper—Here you are, sir, the best quality.

Customer—How much?

Shopkeeper—One fifty each.

Customer—All right, wrap them up. Now, how much are these socks?

Shopkeeper—Fifty cents a pair.

Customer—Well, I'll take three dozen pairs instead of the shirts.

The socks are done up and the customer starts for the door with the bundle.

Shopkeeper — Hold on there, you haven't paid for those socks.

Customer—Certainly not. I took them in exchange for the shirts.

Shopkeeper—Yes, but you didn't pay for the shirts.

Customer—Certainly not, because I didn't take them.

Shopkeeper—That's a fact, and he spends the next half hour trying to make his cash balance.—New York Herald.

Public Office in China.

The Chinese system of government lacks entirely the progressive and unifying element of popular election. The people have no voice in the choice of their rulers, and the rulers consider the people as so many sheep to be fleeced. The officials are paid starvingly low salaries, and many offices are openly bought. Corruption and extortion may therefore be said to be almost sanctioned, the only restraint being the dread of insurrection and the power of guilds, clans and secret societies. There is imperfect protection from robbers and pirates, many villages preferring to subsidize robber bands rather than to have to deal with the worse form of robbery practiced by the officials.—Westminster Review.

Emile Zola's Working Hours.

Emile Zola's habits are extremely regular. He takes a walk every morning, usually leaving his house, whether at Medan or at Paris, about 9 o'clock. He lunches at midday, and writes from 1 o'clock till 6, receiving no visitors and transacting no business in the afternoon. He has a particular liking for large and massive pieces of furniture, so his writing table and his library chairs are of colossal proportions, as is also his inkstand, which is in bronze and represents a lion.—Paris Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

What Pain Do Animals Feel?

When the sensitiveness to pain of the negro, compared with that of the European, is but one to three, as Dr. Felkin concludes it is, what relation to the latter is borne by the sensitiveness of the monkey? of the bird? of the reptile and the fish? of creatures lower still?—London Sunday Magazine?

An Automatic Applauder.

A Frenchman has perfected an invention by which managers of theaters can ascertain on first nights, in a practical manner, the feelings of the public. The contrivance is an automatic applauder, set in motion by a five centime piece.—New York Journal.

The irregularity of Maine's coast line is indicated by the fact that a Lubec man who bought a horse in Eastport was obliged to drive the animal more than forty miles to reach his home, although the two towns are only three miles apart in a straight line.

To the Eskimos of Labrador belong the honor of having discovered that the moon was the paradise of the good, and that the wicked are to be consigned to a cold cave in the center of the earth.

The man who never went to the theater in his life is usually the man who declares loudest against the immorality of the stage.
