The Sallers' Strike.

As between unions of capital, and unions of labor, the TRIBUNE has ever been, and ever will be, the unalterable friend of both, but of flesh and blood above all considerations. "Labor," as Lincoln so truly said "is prior to capital, and therefore is above capital." The union of capital, however came first, with its oppression, and forced the union of labor in the name of humanity, and liberty. This is the only age in all history, wherein the union of capital has not driven labor into slavery. It destroyed all governments of the past, brought on the Dark Ages, and had it not been checked in modern times by the union of labor, the decay that marked the loss of liberty, and the fall of the Roman Empire in Julius Caesar's time, would be upon the civilized world today. There is no more analogy in the rights of capital and of labor than there is between an insensate stone and a warm human heart. But cupid is the strongest and most universal passion of man, who if not educated in morals, or repressed by law, is a universal robber. There can scarcely an instance be cited where large and long union of capital has not become oppressive robbers; nor is it yet proved beyond a reasonable doubt that there ever has been, or will be, a long union of labor, or a peoples' government for that matter, that will not become unjust, and oppressive, not only to capital but to human rights.

We have faith, however, that a people, fit for self government, are foreshadowed, but they are not yet in sight. We uphold all Unions that protect labor, and uphold Human rights. We do not blame them for improving their conditions to normal grounds. But for any union to take advantage of disaster to their fellowmen, as it appears the Sallers of this Coast are now doing, when their wages are so vastly in excess of such wages in any other part of the world—even in excess of what was ever before known—and to hold up their employers like highwaymen because they have the "drop," we have words of condemnation, and not of commendation, for their unjust action. They will lose the good will of their friends by so unwise a course, and injure the cause of labor, by making arguments for their enemies.

How Editors Get Rich.

After a good deal of study and work we have at last figured out why so many country editors get rich. Here is the secret of success: A child is born in the neighborhood, the attending physician gets $10; the editor gives the loud-lunged youngster and the "happy parents" a send off and gets $0. It is christened; the minister gets $10 and the editor gets $00. It grows up and marries; the editor publishes another long waded, flowery article and tells a dozen lies about the "beautiful and accomplished bride"; the minister gets $10 and a piece of cake and the editor gets $000. In the course of time it dies and the doctor gets from $25 to $100; the minister perhaps gets another $15; the undertaker gets from $50 to $100; the editor publishes a note of the death and an obituary two columns long, and lodge and society resolutions, a lot of poetry and a free card of thanks and gets $0000. No wonder so many country editors get rich.

Bryan.

That Bryan will be the Democratic Nominee for the Presidency is a foregone conclusion, if he lives. He is practically nominated by a unanimous party. He is not likely to make any mistakes between now and the convention. The prejudice against him has died out and his ability and honesty is everywhere admitted. He is today, the greatest private citizen of the world, and now has as wide a sphere of influence and acquaintance with the leaders of all nations as any man in the world. Tens of thousands of men of all parties would support Bryan gladly against any other man than Roosevelt. There never was a more interesting campaign, foreshadowed in time of peace, and it will be the people, and not the politicians, in the saddle.

The following is some of Bryan's recent views:

"Before leaving home I tried to distinguish between Democracy and what can properly be called Socialism. Democracy recognizes competition as legitimate and tries to protect the competitive principle from attack. Socialism sees competition as an evil to be eliminated by public ownership and operation of all means of production and distribution. While this distinction cannot be overlooked, the Democratic platform must be one of progress and reform and not merely of opposition to Republican policies of Socialistic ideas.

Alluding to conditions in the meat industry, Mr. Bryan said:

"The beef trust is not different in character methods from trusts. The inevitable tendency of a private monopoly is to increase the price of product and to lower its quality. Why should anyone expect anything else from a trust than the lowering of quality when a monopoly is established? Observe, I have used the words private monopoly, not against those of the whole people. Quite a different principle comes into operation when the interest of all is alone in view."

Unjust Indictment.

The action of the U. S. Court for Oregon, in indicting Frank A. Stewart, W. T. Kerr, John R. Miller and A. S. Johnston, Curry county, for complicity in the land frauds, launched and, to a certain extent, conducted to a successful issue by one R. D. Jones and certain other "promoters" of Los Angeles, is a great injustice, and their conviction can only be obtained upon technical grounds or perjured evidence. The editor of the SPOKESMAN knows all these gentlemen and can vouch for them as gentlemen above reproach, as high-minded, honorable men who would not be guilty of an intentional wrong. Any thing that would have the least semblance of fraud would not be countenanced or in any manner encouraged by them or any of them.

To indict these men on a trumped up charge on perjured or technical evidence is a wrong that should meet the severest kind of punishment. To constitute a crime, a wrongful spirit or intention should be established, and to prove that one of these men would be guilty of intentional wrong is as impossible as would be a trip to the planet Mars.—The Spokesman.

Thanks, Brother Strange for your kind words. I was involved in no unlawful land transactions. I was not aware that an effort was being made to indict me and hence had no opportunity to be called before the grand jury, as I should have been. I have at times severely criticized the manner of a landstealing land affairs by Hitchcock, as being in the interests of the Scrip grafters and against our honest, struggling settlers, and was told that I had better be careful.

My interests were in standing by my neighbors, and actual settlers to prevent outsiders and scrip holders from gobbling up all the timber in the vicinity where I lived and in trying to have business, honestly started, in a community that certainly needed it. I do not know of a single fraudulent claim by our settlers, nor do I believe there was one in the vicinity of my Ophir home.

Editor TRIBUNE:—Complying with your request I send you the following communication. Local news in this vicinity that would be of interest to the readers of the TRIBUNE, is very scarce.

I might go back for a period of six weeks to that eventful morning—April 18th, and describe my experiences and emotions during those well remembered seconds which seemed like hours in their passing while the whole world seemed falling to pieces and there seemed no safe place of retreat. But the subject, big as it is, has been pretty well exhausted by poet and by scribe. Was it possible for every one of the thousands of people who experienced the California earthquake on April 18th last, to write an account of his or her experiences at that time it is safe to predict that no two would tell the same story as to detail but all would agree that they experienced one sensation in common, that of genuine fright and terror, a sensation once to be experienced, never to be forgotten. If there is anything that will drive terror to the heart of man it is to be suddenly awakened from a sound and peaceful sleep by a rushing, roaring almost deafening sound, like the rushing of a mighty cataract or the roaring of a mighty wind.

Such was my rude awakening on that well remembered morning. My wife and I then occupied rooms in the second story of a residence on Second street, a tall and rather narrow wooden, frame building. I sat up in bed to find the house swaying like a ship in the trough of a heavy sea. The bureau and other pieces of furniture were sliding around the room; books and vases fell from the shelves, pictures swayed and banged against the wall, dishes fell to the floor with a crash while the house cracked and cracked as if ready to fall to pieces, and mingled with these crashing sounds was the shrieking of women and screaming of children on the street and in nearby buildings. I got out of bed but the house was pitching about at such a rate that I was unable to stand without holding to the bed for support, but I managed to take the key from a shelf near the bed and unlock the door. I then turned to tell my wife to hasten down stairs and was surprised to find her standing by the bed calmly putting on her clothes as the shock had now passed. During it all she never uttered a word and I want to testify here to the genuine grit and nerve of at least one Southern Woman.

A very unusual amount of rain has fallen here this spring, and equally weather still continues. Quite a severe storm swept over this section of the state during the latter part of May, and did considerable damage to fruit and hay. Bay is harvested about six weeks earlier here in the Santa Clara Valley than on the coast of Oregon.

I received a very pleasant visit last Friday from "San" Thrift and his brother Allen. "San" will leave by the next trip on the Breakwater, for Marshfield where he expects to obtain employment in one of the large retail stores. His brother Allen is associated with Wood & Wood, Real Estate Agent in Oak land.

Yours truly,
W. F. RILEY.

The square man measures the same each way and hasn't any cheap or crooked lumber about him. He is free from knots and sap and don't warp. He is clear stuff and, no matter what you work him up into, he won't swell and he won't shrink. He is among the best wood with dried boards are among carpenters. It doesn't make any difference what side of him you come up to he is the same bigness each way and, anyhow, the only way you can get at him is to face him. He knows he is square and never spends any time trying to prove it. The square man is the best shaped man the world ever produced.—Spokesman.

EUCHRE CREEK!

JULY 4, 1906!

Wonderful Natural Resources of Curry County not Realized.

Port Orford Or., June 12.—It is stated with much truth that no county in Oregon is quite so interesting from many viewpoints as is Curry, probably the least known and understood of any in the state. Sixty years ago it was a wilderness, traversed by half-hidden trails; today it is a district of stage routes and trails, proud of one port only, where a coastwise steamer touches regularly on its way from San Francisco to Coos bay and return.

PORT ORFORD INTERESTING. Returning to Port Orford there are many interesting things to say. The little town lies at the side of the only natural harbor between San Francisco and the straits of De Fuca. Tichenor bay, or Ewing harbor, as it is nautically called, lies 10 miles south of Cape Blanco, latitude 42.44, longitude 124.30 west, and is a deep, broad, capacious roadstead, having on the west and north a headland, perpendicular on the harbor side and 350 feet in altitude; it has the very best holding ground of any roadstead on the coast, composed of sand, loam and decomposed slate. A quarter of a mile outside of the extreme south point of the heads the water deepens rapidly and soon attains a great depth, the effect of which is to permit heavy ground swells settling in at the roadstead. From the south point of the heads, due east to the base of Humbag, a mountain peak, the harbor is four miles broad. It is exempt from all sunken dangers either in it or its approach. It is equidistant between San Francisco and Puget sound and 220 miles south of the Columbia river. The land is high and prominent, effectively protecting the harbor on three sides. The heads are formed of most durable rock, with bold water from seven to ten fathoms immediately against them. The heads afford at hand all the material and of excellent quality with which to build a breakwater, which would have the effect of making a bleak stretch of coast 600 miles in length with a harbor of refuge, which now it has none.

The war department has estimated that a breakwater 2,000 feet long could be constructed for less than 3,500,000 which would give available protection to about 90 acres, with a depth of from 6 to 12 fathoms. A number of years ago Congress appropriated $150,000 for preliminary work on such a construction, which was never used. The assurance of a railroad down the coast from Marshfield to Eureka thence through California to San Francisco, over the Santa Fe, leads the people of southwestern Oregon and masters of coastwise vessels to believe that the breakwater scheme will again be agitated.

TRANSPORTATION IS NEEDED. Present conditions in southwestern Oregon demand suitable transportation facilities, and so soon as they are obtained rapid progress will be made in a score of industries for which the natural resources of the country has so well prepared.

A wealth of the finest granite and marble will lay untouched; hundreds of miles of valuable timber will stand uncultured; quarter sections of land superbly suited to stock-raising and dairying will remain covered with scrub growth; coalfields prospected but undeveloped, will continue in their primitive state, unless adequate means to get the goods to market are supplied. The railroad is going to be built down the coast and the fact is gratifying. It will be the sure means of adding to the state of Oregon, wealth which now lies hidden.—Journal.

Peculiar To Itself

In what it is and what it does—containing the best blood-purifying, alterative and tonic substances and effecting the most radical and permanent cures of all humors and eruptions, relieving weak, tired, languid feelings, and building up the whole system—is true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

No other medicine acts like it; no other medicine has done so much real, substantial good, no other medicine has restored health and strength at so little cost. "I was troubled with eczema and came near losing my eyesight. For four months I could not see to do anything. After taking two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I could see to walk, and when I had taken eight bottles I could see as well as ever."—S. W. A. HAINES, Withers, N. C. Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.
