business-letter form of conversation.

"I'll just go down and have it done, aryway," said she to herself the next morning. "He'll be so delighted with the way it looks that he'll just fall upon my neck and weep with very joy."

When the job was done, and she saw erself in the glass, she didn't admire herself so much as she had anticipated she would. Nor was she quite so confident that when her husband saw her transformed head he would fall upon her

"Uh-huh," he said, when he came in that evening. "You've done it, I see."

He didn't say a word. A gloomy si-ence brooded over the flat for the reainder of the evening.

When he emerged from the hotel bar-ber shop the hirsute fringe on his upper lip was the blackest thing ever seen on land or sea.

It was so black that it made him look like a photograph taken after his deand associates for the remainder of the day, and then he went home and burst into the flat with a grisly attempt at a cheery grin and a bluff manner. His wife met him in the flat hall.

His wife met him in the flat hall.

"Well,"how do you like it?" he inquired of her. "Great, Isn't it, hey?"

Thought I'd have it fixed up as a sort of contrast to you, y'know. Now we're both ornamental around the house. You look like an orange-padded tabourette, and I look like a cross-section of an oil stove. Oh, but we're a lovely bunch!" and he chuckled gloomily.

Then he caught sight of himself in the mirror over the mantel, and fell.

Then he caught sight or himself in the mirror over the mantel, and fell into a chair and howled mirthlessly.
