ISSUED EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENING.

Senator Foraker is making a noise like a man trying to keep quiet.

Quite a warm political fight is developing in Del Norte county, California, over the office of Superior Judge. Frank W. Taft, a rising young Attorney, is leading the Democratic phalanx, while John L. Childs, the present Republican encumbent, aspires to succeed himself. Both gentlemen are well acquainted in Curry and are eminently fitted to fill the office they seek.

Pessimist and Optimist.

Mankind can be arranged with as many classifications, as the most imaginative mind may conceive, and yet there is a fundimental classification that admits of but two classes: the Pessimist and the Optimist, and we are all one or the other. It strikes us as being important that all of us know the characteristics of each class, and to which we belong.

The pissimist is so omnipresent nowadays, that a new name has been given him to save time. He is now called a "knocker", and you will find him everywhere casting his black shadow over the hopes of his fellow-men. You will know him by his "ifs" and "buts." He walks the earth with head down and mind in lurid black, hunting for mud-holes in nature and man, and treasures like a miser every bad spot he discovers. His eyes are solemn, his voice sepulchral, and ghost like he revels in shivers that creap up his back bone.

He would put out the lamp of Hope, and the fires of Ambition, in all mankind. He throws cold water upon all enterprise, and even were he Elijah he would see nothing but the black in the ravens that fed him. To him there is no music in the crowing of the babe, the laughter of childhood and the song of serene old age. He sees no beauty in the flowers of Earth, the stars of the heavens, or in the pictures of art and nature. His breath is as poisonous as the simoons of the south, or as icy as a Hyporborean blast. He has a black brain and the "evil eye," and the mystery of the ages is that he has survived the horrors of his own imagination Out upon him whoever and wherever he be.

Give us everytime the full blown, Optimist with all his warmth and raidiant colors. He walks in an atmosphere of Hope, and scatters smiles and sunshine with a royal hand, wherever his bouyant footfall rings. To him all nature is a poem, all sounds are are songs, all men are brothers. He looks for goodness and beauty and finds happiness, for men find what they look for. In the "economy of nature," man is unlearned; but may it not be that the two classes are necessary as "Divine Equalizers" to maintain the equipment of human nature? But whether so, or not, give us the Booming Optimist every time!

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O

L. J. Simpson of North Bend, has secured a franchise from the county court for the use of the public highway between Pony Slough and Sunset Bay for an electric line. It was unofficially stated today that the matter had been closed up and that Mr. Simpson would begin the construction of the line next spring.

It is understood to be Mr. Simpson's idea to convert Sunset Bay into a great pleasure resort. It is one of the most beautiful spots along this coast and he has extensive holdings there. He has built an elegant summer home "Shore Acres" there. Construction work on the line between North Bend and Pony Slough was started sometime ago so that the two will connect up, making a direct line from Coos Bay at North Bend to the new pleasure ground.—Times.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 16.—Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw quietly came into Boston in her automobile from Portland, Me., and yesterday spent much of her time at the Globe theater with Joe Welch, of the "Morning, Noon and Night" company, and his manager, E. C. Vion. Mrs. Thaw's brother, Howard Nesbit, is playing with the company, and last night he said Mrs. Thaw had come here to secure a theatrical engagement, and that it was likely that she would go out with the company when it leaves Boston in two weeks. Mrs. Thaw refused to discuss the report, but Mr. Welch admitted that they had talked the affair over. "From what Mrs. Thaw tells me" he said, "She is 'broke' and has to go to work. I'd be glad to have her with us, if we can settle on terms."

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Despite all efforts of the antis to prevent the renomination of Governor Hughes at the Republican State Convention yesterday, the supporters of the New York executive swept everything before it when the time came for making a choice and the Governor was renominated on the first ballot. He received 1827 votes out a possible 1009, as against 151 for James W. Wadsworth, Jr., and 31 for ex Congressman John K. Stewart. On motion of State Committeeman William Barnes Jr. the nomination was made unanimous. Barnes had been one of the bitterest opponents of the Governor.

The vote of New York County decided the contest, all but one of 184 votes being cast for Hughes.

The platform in indorsing Taft and the Republican National ticket says:

The Republican party of the state of New York, in convention assembled, proud of its achievements and promising every effort for still greater accomplishments, declares as follows:

We heartily ratify the ticket nominated by the Republican Convention at Chicago and subscribe to the platform there adopted.

We endorse the declarations of William H. Taft and James S. Sherman in accepting their respective nominations.

We cordially approve the interpretation and fulfillment of promises made in National platforms by Republican Congresses and by a matchless array of Republican Presidents from Abraham Lincoln to Theodore Roosevelt.

The Country Editor

(Washington, Ia., Democrat.)

Every once in a while there is a deluge of articles on the country editor. The big papers are always discussing the country editor. They handle him with gloves on, as if he were some pest that had to be handled gingerly, or that might be catching, like measles or smallpox. Or he might be liable to break out in a new place, like a wild Indian.

What is the use? Who asks the big papers for any patronage or for any encouragement, or for any odds for that matter? Surely, we do not. We say, we get tired of it.

The country editor is as independent as a hog on ice, compared to the big city editor. Of course, he defers to his biggest advertiser. When his biggest advertiser's daughter gets married he swears by the long horn spoon that she is a fairy nymph, when ten to one her feet don't track, and her hat is on crooked. He defers to his "oldest subscriber" who pays for a dozen copies to send to kin, and when he comes to town he speaks of "our prominent citizen, Mr. Doodab," and writes nice pieces about the team he drives and about how liberal he is at the church and in charity, when he knows doggone well that he pays the preacher in scabby potatoes and talks low to save wear and tear to his vocal chords and makes his wife go barefoot in Summer to save shoe leather. However, aside from this, the country editor is as independent as we said he was.

But he asks no odds from his city brother, and, dad bump his pictures, he doesn't ask for any nice pieces to be written about him. He eats three square meals a day if he can get them, and if not he writes nice pieces about a land that flows milk and honey and swears "by gum" that his party is entitled to.

Ask favors from our city brothers! Not on your chin whiskers. The country editor breathes the pure, free air of liberty, and you get more patriotism in the average country paper in a week than you get in the big city daily in a coon's age. The country editor thinks he believes what he writes, while half the city editors—we mean the political and religious writers—write what they are paid to write. Thus many a Democrat is boosting for the Republican party, while the Republican editor writes nice pieces about Bryan. In the country, bless your life, we live near to nature and near to our critics, who find us out before we find out ourselves If we renig on any proposition before sundown half a dozen offended subscribers are in the office trying to stop their vile paper.

Tell us the country editor has a hard lot. Maybe he has, but he is at least on the square. He believes what he says, unless it is his big advertiser, who believes it for him. But you come a good deal nearer to the facts than you do in the city paper, where the work is done by scores of writers, and nobody knows who the guilty party may be.

The country editor—bless you, he sees just as many funny things and laughs up his sleeve at them just the same as you big city editors do. He sees shams and pretense and the new rich and the men who work religion and those who try to work the lodge and those who are bosses and those who only think they are, but he just laughs. As James Whitcomb Riley says of old Jap Miller, "He just chawed on." So we just chaw on.

Never mind writing nice pieces about the country editors. You may feel sorry for them, but don't let them find it out, or you might find yourself in contact with a stuffed club. It is all right to feel sorry for him but you had better not say anything about it. Many of them are where they are from choice. There are country editors who could command more conspicuous positions, but they prefer their life of ease and luxury and affluence and high living and independence and independent thinking, to any of your measly, little, cooped up, narrow, hack-writing city editorships. Now is that clear? If so, then pass the pie.

Splendid Work of Marshfield Student Who Never Went to School a Day in His Life

Marshfield, Oregon, Sept. 18., 1907.
To whom it may concern:

Born in Ireland and raised in Indian Territory, I learned the alphabet after I was twenty-four years of age.

One year ago I enrolled in the I. C. S course in Steam Engineering, but found that it would be necessary to first study penmanship, which I did.

The instruction papers were so simple and clear and the special instruction so good that I have already mastered over 1000 pages of technical work on Steam Engineering and received markings of 94 per cent to 99 per cent on the following subjects:

Arithmetic (five papers) Mensuration, Machine Elements, Principles of Mechanics, Mechanics of Fluids, Strength of Materials, Heat and Steam, Types of Steam Boilers, Boiler Details, Boiler Fittings, Boiler Design.

If any persons are skeptical about the merits of the International Correspondence Schools, or doubt the truth of stories of success that come from distant places, I should like to talk to them and show them my first work compared to later work that they may judge for themselves. Seeing is believing.

I feel that my course has already opened the future to me, although I have only begun my studies. If this letter should assist someone else to find the light that I have found, it will serve its purpose.

Very Truly

Edison Passes Day in Portland

CEMENT HOUSES HIS HOBBY NOW

Democratic, plain American citizen, Thomas A. Edison, the Wizard of Menlo Park, and one of the foremost citizens of the United States, passed a quiet Sunday in Portland. It was the occasion of his first visit to the Northwest and one of the few vacations taken out of an unusually busy life. Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Edison and daughter visited points of interest around the city by streetcar and on foot. They expressed pleasure in coming into close contact with the people who use those methods of locomotion from necessity, rather than choice. This morning the party went up to The Dalles by boat, and will continue on to Salt Lake by rail tonight.

The great inventor talked freely of the work he has accomplished in the electrical field and predicts that scientists of the future will turn more and more to investigation of that force in solving the problems affecting the world's supply of heat and power. Mr. Edison thinks his discovery of the incandescent light was the greatest event of his life's work, but at this time he is intensely interested in the development of a method of supplying cheap transportation for the moving of truckage in the larger cities and in his method of constructing cement dwellings for the better accommodation of workingmen.

He believes the transportation problem of New York City alone to be a question worthy of his best efforts, and is now testing a battery and motor attached to wagons belonging to the Adams Express Company in that city. If successful, the invention will cheapen the cost of delivery in the city and obviate the congestion of traffic which frequently ties up streets.

Mr. Edison is now building commodious dwelling houses at his plant, made of cement, and costing not to exceed $1200 for a building of 11 rooms. These he is renting for $7.40 a month. The same building in Portland would not cost more than $1500. He has not entirely abandoned the idea of making these dwellings in portable sections, so that they can be erected in communities near the place of manufacture of the blocks. He is also working on the concrete idea of construction, which is operated by a set of frames which can be transported to various places and by which a small force of men can construct a number of houses in a few days, and which contain no wood aside from the doors and window frames. He believes the growing scarcity of timber will necessitate this form of dwelling in the future.—Telegram.
