NOTICE OF BANK MEETING.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the Stockholders of the Bank of Port Orford will be held on Tuesday, January 12th, 1915, at the banking rooms of said bank, for the election of Directors for the ensuing year, and consideration of such other business as may appear before the meeting.

Dated this 9th day of December, 1914

Town and County

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Loney are expected home from California this week.

Frank P. Cook, of Sixes, made a business trip to Euchre creek since our last issue.

A card from John R. Miller states that he and Mrs. Miller are now enjoying themselves at Long Beach, California.

Dr. Huston, of Bandon, made a professional visit to Gold Beach last week, passing through here on his return home Sunday.

We are glad to be able to state that E. J. Baker, who suffered a stroke of paralysis last week, is so much improved as to be able to be about the house again.

A report is current that an important business change will soon take place in Port Orford, whereby C. W. Zumwalt & sons will become the owners of Ames S. Johnston's general merchandise store.

F. A. Stewart came up from Wedderburn Friday and is arranging a collection of agates which he will send to the Panama fair. N. F. Woodcock and Mrs. L. Knapp are also preparing exhibits for the fair.

Lex Cope, of Langlois, was the lucky man who drew the $100 diamond ring given away by the Boyle Jewelry company of Bandon, holding No. 1429. Miss Flora McLeod of Bandon, won the $50 ring on No. 1994.

There was an irregularity concerning the petition for a survey of a wagon road up Sixes river to Eckley, which caused the county court to defer the matter to the April term. That the survey will be granted at that time is highly probable.

At a recent meeting of the Coos County Pharmaceutical association the druggists of that county passed resolutions condemning the use of intoxicants and agreeing that in the future they would not sell or offer for sale any vinous or malt liquors, whether on the prescription of a physician or otherwise.

The petitions of A. J. Marsh and A. A. Jamieson for appointment as road supervisor in this district were so nearly equal in length and so many people had signed both petitions that Commissioner Sypher sought the easiest way out and named W. P. Bryant supervisor. Mr. Bryant has had considerable experience at road building and will doubtless prove an efficient man in the place.

The postoffice department has advertised for applicants for the position as postmaster at Port Orford. Applications should be mailed to the department before Jan. 21st, and unless some such applications be received the department threatens to discontinue the office. This situation has come about by the fact that when the civil service examination was held at Gold Beach last summer covering the appointment to this office there were no applicants for the place, postmaster Johnston not taking the examination on account of sickness.

Ed. Bostwick, a homesteader living on the upper waters of Floras creek, was arrested last week by Game Warden Thomas of Coos county for killing deer out of season. The game warden found nine hides in the vicinity of Bostwick's home, and an estimate is made that the arrested man had killed as many as forty deer since the season closed. A Myrtle Point restaurant keeper will probably become involved for having trafficked in the meat. Bostwick is a poor man, and it is understood that he supported his wife and child by hunting for the market.

The acorn crop throughout the oak woods of Curry county was almost a failure this winter, and many of the ranchers who depend upon this mast to fatten their hogs have been disappointed. L. E. Miller, who has a large band of hogs on the headwaters of Euchre creek, was fortunate in this matter, as there was a heavy crop of Myrtle nuts along the creek and his hogs after cleaning up the acorns moved down onto these nuts and rounded out in fine condition. The Myrtle nut acts much the same as corn upon a hog, making the meat and lard firmer and more saleable than where the animal has been fattened on acorns alone. Mr. Miller has just killed some forty or fifty head of as fine hogs as one would care to see.

At the annual meeting of the Port Orford Wharf Company, held on Jan. 6, 1915, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Directors, Ames S. Johnston, John Fromm, W. T. White, Wm. Gillings and E. J. Loney. President W. T. White; Secretary and Treasurer E. J. Loney.

Much excellent work has been done on the Cedar Fork road during the past year. When it shall have been completed, and the road on the south side of Rogue river from Bagnell's ferry to the mouth is repaired, the greater portion of the through travel will leave the present road at Euchre creek and travel this new route. It will not only afford protection from the disagreeable winds of summer and storms of winter, but it runs through a country where gravel is convenient at all points, and can soon be made into a hard surfaced road the year round. Less delay is had in crossing Rogue river at the Bagnell ferry than at the mouth.

Clint Malehorn accompanied Commissioner Sypher to county court last week in an endeavor to sell to the county a Buick traction engine to be used in graveling the roads. It is claimed that one of these tractors, hauling three or four wagons, will put gravel on the road for 30 or 40 cents per cubic yard that under the present system of horses and wagons costs from $2 50 to $3 per cubic yard. One of these engines costs close to $3,000 but as the gravel hauls are getting longer and longer Mr. Malehorn contends that it would easily pay for itself in two years work. Mr. Malehorn also has the Curry county agency for the Buick automobile, and has several cars engaged for delivery in the early spring.

Popular Young Couple Wed.

Mr. Robert Forty and Miss Myrtle McGill were united in marriage at the groom's home in Port Orford, Sunday Jan. 10th, 1915, Justice M. T. Wright officiating. The groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Forty and has grown to manhood at this place, while the bride moved to Port Orford with her parents from Bandon about a year ago. The happy young couple are among the most popular members of the younger set, and a dance was given for their benefit Monday night, music being furnished by the band. Mr. and Mrs. Forty have rented rooms in the Nielson building on Jackson street, where they are receiving the congratulations of their many friends.

Gold Beach Items.

County court last week.

The Gold Beach Globe was awarded the county printing for 1915.

W. Weersing is in town purchasing the things necessary for carrying the mail between Agness and Dothan.

Mrs. Gent Russell intends starting Monday for her home near Langlois "if it don't rain."

Frank Flanders has rented the Gold Beach black-smith shop and says he can make anything from a "cambric needle to a ship's anchor."

Married—Jan. 9th, 1915, at the home of the groom's parents, Miss Stella Williamson to Mr. Harry Gauntlett, Rev. Hoyt officiating. We wish them a smooth journey over life's rugged pathway.

Game Warden John Adams was attending to business matters in Gold Beach the latter part of the week.

Floyd Tompkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Tompkins, is visiting his grandparents Mr. and Mrs. J. Huntley of this place.

Frank Colvin has given up his his position in D. M. Moore's store and has taken up bachelors quarters at his ranch on Hunterscreek where he will care for his stock during the winter.

Frank Bauers was appointed road supervisor at the recent term of county court.

There is some talk of a handicap wrestling match Feb. 14—Lutsey to throw any five men in Gold Beach in thirty minutes.

Bids will now be received for the building of the road from Gold Beach to the Bagnell Ferry on the south side of the river. Bids will be let for the building of one or more miles.

Now and Then.

A cold, disagreeable storm, accompanied by considerable high wind, has been visiting this section during the past several days.

We welcome a new correspondent "Evergreen" from Euchre creek, to our circle this week, and hope to hear more of the doings of that progressive little neighborhood from this source during the future.

Goes To The Pen.

William Rogers Young, convicted Tuesday of eloping with Mrs. Jessie Quigley, of Port Orford was sentenced on Wednesday to from six months to two years in the state penitentiary by Judge Coke.

Judge Coke in pronouncing sentence, termed Young "a lecherous, lascivious despoiler of homes," and said that he was sorry that the law did not provide a more severe punishment for such individuals as Young. "The court hopes you will have to serve the extreme term," concluded Judge Coke.

This case proved not only one of the most interesting and generously attended events during the present term of court, but marked the first trial of its kind during the incumbency of District Attorney Liljeqvist covering a period of over six years. Incidentally, the County Prosecutor gave notice that this case would not be the last of its kind, the jury being promised that a conviction would mean the beginning of additional cases of a similar nature.

Young, who was known as Rogers in Curry county, proved a strong witness in many respects while on the stand. He told his story without a second's hesitation and gave what seemed to many to be a plausible reason for taking the mother of three children, a boy of ten, another of seven, and a daughter of eight, from her husband's home to another county of the state and for having lived with her as her husband. He emphatically denied having immoral relations, declared that the woman appealed to him to help her to get away and insisted that she had never been more than a housekeeper to him, receiving $10 per month as such.

The eight year-old tot of a girl was put on the stand and, somewhat frightened ending in tears, stoutly defended her mother, although District Attorney Liljeqvist declined to cross examine her, declaring such an act would have been brutal.

After the conclusion of the Young case, Mrs. Quigley, the woman in the case was about to be placed on trial for the same offense, when a surprise was sprung on the court and the public. Mrs. Quigley had retained Attorney R. O. Graves, of Marshfield, to defend her; and he had beat her husband to it by filing a suit for divorce a few hours before he was ready to do the same thing.

For his suit along that line, Mr. Quigley had retained J. O. Stemmer.

Instead of promoting the coming litigation, these attorneys did all they could to suppress it and used their good offices to such effect that they effected a reconciliation between the widely sundered pair, and got them to promise to go home and live together and let bygones be bygones.

District Attorney Liljequist was more than ready to promote this arrangement and dismissed the criminal action against Mrs. Quigley, thus discharging her from custody and throwing the case out of court.—Coquille Sentinel.

Col. Rosa Responsible For New Railroad Talk.

While at the Bay last week Col. Rosa was accredited with a little railroad talk that is of interest to local people. According to his interview there are good prospects for a railroad from Bandon or Port Orford to Myrtle Point via the Coquille valley. He states the Gallier Bros. and others have been working steadily on the project for several years and are more enthusiastic over it than ever.

The Grants Pass road he declared would mean more to Coos county than any other line, not excluding the Southern Pacific's coast road. In addition to the millions of feet of timber that the road would tap, it would open the great Squaw Basin coal deposits, which is the best coal field on the coast. This coal can be coked, which cannot be done with any other in this section.—Western World.

Twenty-two Years Ago.

The following items are taken from the Port Orford Tribune of December 27, 1892, Walter Sutton, publisher:

Don't forget to write 1893.

Al Coolidge is preparing to erect a large mercantile building at Chetco.

The Nordberg house at Brushes creek, occupied by M. T. Wright and family, was so badly damaged by the storm as to make it untenable, and Mr. Wright moved to the Wilbur house, further up the creek.

And now the people along the coast are again annoyed by an irregular mail service from the interior, caused by storms. The completion of the Coos Bay-Roseburg railroad will be the means of furnishing us with regular and uninterrupted mails at all seasons.

The most serious results of the recent unusually severe storm to the people of Curry county is the damage to the road, which is filled with fallen timber from one end to the other—that is, through the timbered portions. Although as yet there have been no slides of any consequence the fallen timber is lying so think in places that the expense of opening will be very great.

There must be a fearful blockade of the road over the Coast Range mountains and the Bay, since no mail of any kind reached here from the interior during the whole of last week. But such a thing is not an unusual happening on that route, for it seems to be an invariable fact that every little storm each winter is followed by an entire suspension of the mails; and it generally so happens that a greater portion of the paper mail never reaches its destination, and the dwellers along the coast have long ago decided that

Those fair-weather servants of Uncle Sam
In winter time ain't worth a—clam.

The steamer Emily arrived from Coos Bay about two o'clock Saturday night, and notwithstanding there was a dense fog and the sea was running high, she worked her way to the wharf, where she lay and discharged thirty tons of freight. Capt. Roberts is entitled to, and receives due credit for his energy in surmounting every difficulty, in order to meet the demands of the coast trade. While a few may accuse him of being too reckless and venturesome, such is not the fact. He has certain duties to perform and he performs them in an intelligent and systematic manner. In meeting the requirements of the coast trade risks cannot be avoided, and he bravely faces them when necessary; but he is really a very careful man, and combines everlasting vigilance and sound judgment with years of hard earned experience among the nooks and coves, and rocks and shoals of the coast. He is the right man in the right place, and it is the general hope that he may continue to minister to our needs as he has in the past, and may success forever attend him.
