NEED OF HALL OR OPERA HOUSE

The entertainment by the ladies of the M. E. church in the school house last Friday night was an object lesson that Redmond needs a commodious hall or opera house, capable of seating at least 500 people. The school house was crowded Friday night to an uncomfortable degree, and not near enough seats could be given the audience.

It is to be hoped that a suitable hall or opera house will be built this fall so as to have it in readiness for the winter amusements.

There has been some talk of putting up such a building, but so far nothing definite has materialized. The city has grown to such proportions that a public place of the above character is now an absolute necessity, and the one who fills this want will make good on the investment.

Bawling cows and barking dogs are about the worst nuisance a citizen has to contend with at night. And Redmond as well as other places, has some of these nuisances.

The street sprinkler has begun to sprinkle, and now it will be a race for the sprinkler man to see if he can beat the dust and make it lay down.

The man who doesn't register before the 14th will be sorry—he won't get a chance to vote in November. REGISTER TODAY.

The Redmond Spokesman is receiving new subscribers by nearly every mail from people living outside of the city. They say they want to keep in touch with what is going on in Redmond and find The Spokesman just the right medium for their information.
