NEW "WET" TOWNS ARE "WET" AT ONCE

The Attorney General Holds
Wet Towns May License at Once

Attorney General Crawford has held in an opinion that the city councils of towns that have voted wet in counties that went dry under the local option law at the election last week can license saloons by ordinance without another vote being taken on the matter. This is true, says the attorney general for the reason that the new home rule amendment to the constitution will go into effect as soon as the returns of the election are canvassed and the governor's proclamation has been issued, while counties that have voted dry will not be dry until January 1.

The law provides that the county courts shall make an order that no liquor be sold in a county where the official returns show that the people have so voted. This order cannot go into effect until January 1. For instance, in Wallowa county, the county court will order that no liquor be sold in that county on or after January 1. The governor will issue a proclamation, probably, before that time declaring that the home rule bill has been enacted into law by the people. It will go into effect at once, allowing the city of Joseph, in Wallowa county, through its city council, to license saloons despite the vote making the county dry.

Also, the attorney general holds that it will be the duty of the county courts to redistrict the cities where election districts include part of the county and part of the incorporated city so that on matters of local option the cities will vote in the general elections independent of the voters who may be in the same election precincts as city voters.

Band Dance A Big Success

The dance given by the Redmond Concert Band in Ehret's hall Wednesday night was a success in every particular. The hall was crowded with an assemblage that came to give the band boys a good send off and help dedicate the new hall. The hall was tastily decorated with flags and bunting and the floor was in good condition for dancing. Part of the dance music was played by the full band, and the balance by an orchestra from the band. Supper was served at the Hotel Redmond, and it was the best spread ever gotten up in Redmond for a public supper.

Death Of Irving D. Gibson

Irving D. Gibson died in Redmond last Thursday from typhoid fever. The funeral was held from the M. E. Church Saturday, Nov. 19th. Rev. Wilson preached an eloquent sermon. Mr. Gibson was a member of Nest 122, Brotherhood of Owls, and the funeral was conducted under the auspices of that order. Many of the members followed the remains to the cemetery.

Change At The Banquet Cafe

Wm. Clancy has bought a half interest in the Banquet Cafe of this city, and the firm name is now Finn & Clancy. Mr. Clancy is an experienced cook and baker, and patrons of the Banquet will be assured of getting the best the market affords.

Meeting of the Fire Dept.

The Redmond Fire Department will hold a meeting Friday night, Nov. 25th, at the Commercial Club Room, to take measures to perfect a permanent organization. The meeting is called for 8 o'clock, and all members who have signed the roll are requested to be present.
