A Big Celebration

Everybody boost for the big 4th of July celebration that Redmond is going to have this year. It will be a state affair, and people from all over Oregon will be invited to come and see what a grand country we have and what a good lot of people live in the Hub City. And a large number of these invited people will come, too, for they have their eyes on this section of the state, and to come here on the 4th would be to combine business with pleasure.

When the R. R. Comes

A two or three days celebration in Redmond when the railroad reaches here has been suggested by some of the citizens. Of course Redmond will celebrate when the road gets here, and it may be depended upon that the celebration will be a classy one—better than any other city or town along the line, for Redmond never does anything by halves. It will be an event that will mark history in this part of the state.

Unequaled Weather

Bright, sunshiny days all through the winter months here is the best advertisement Redmond and the Redmond District could have. It is not mere newspaper talk—we have had the above kind of weather all this winter, and people from outside who have been in the city this winter have been agreeably surprised at our climate.

1911 Boosting

The Redmond Commercial Club is always abreast of the times. This organization has lately completed arrangements for an extensive publicity campaign for the year 1911. While Redmond and this section is pretty well known all over the United States the club proposes to make it better known and will put out their money to advance the interests of this section.

It Will Pay

The poultry business is beginning to attract the attention of a number of people in this section and many ranchers are making preparations to engage in it on quite an extensive scale this year. This is a business that if properly handled will bring in big returns.

Appreciate Spokesman

Thirty-six new subscribers were added to the subscription list of The Spokesman last week. These names were from different localities, some of them as far off as New Mexico. Each week new names are being added to the list. People interested in this section want a newspaper that will keep them posted on the growth and progress here, and for that reason they subscribe for The Spokesman.

To Make It the Best

The Jones Land Co., proprietors of the Hotel Redmond, are taking time by the forelock and making improvements in their hotel to be in readiness to take care of the big rush of people that is sure to come to Redmond with the event of the railroad. The company proposes to show to the new comers that Redmond has one of the best appointed hotels in Central Oregon.

A Good Move

The merchants here have commenced to advertise "sale days" at which times they give bargains on a necessary and staple line of goods. It is just this kind of business methods that will draw business and make Redmond the best trading point in Central Oregon.

Always Boosting

Every issue of The Redmond Spokesman is a boom paper for the city, and those interested in placing the progress and growth of Redmond and this section before the outside world can do no better than to send copies of the paper to persons interested in this locality.

About Time

Now it is about time that a railroad was being built to Prineville from Culver Junction. The other towns north of here on the Oregon Trunk Line have built a road to the county seat, and it is surprising that Culver has not had a road in operation by this time.

Gives the News

The large and growing circulation of The Spokesman has been obtained because The Spokesman is a newspaper in every sense of the word, and gives the news of Redmond and the Redmond District right up to the minute of each week.

Representatives of wholesale houses in Portland are beginning to arrive in Redmond and take orders for future shipment—when the railroad reaches here. Many large orders have been placed.
