A JUNCTION OF NEW ROAD HERE TO USE "JUICE" FROM FALLS

East and West R.R. Cline Falls Power to Connect at Redmond Is Soon to Be Utilized

HIGH OFFICIALS ARE FAVORING PROJECT COMPANY WORKING NOW ON THE PLANS

Line From Vale West is the Project That Has Been Outlined There Will Be Capacity for Any Amount of Power and Lights

Construction by the Harriman interests of a railroad from Vale across the state east and west is now almost an assured fact. Prominent officials of the system while on a recent trip through Oregon looked carefully into the matter, and have decided that it is a feasible proposition, and would be a big saving in mileage and expense to construct such a line.

There are several places where the line from the east could connect with Harriman roads running south from the Columbia river. One of the connections that has been given prominence by the officials is to have the line connect at Redmond with the Deschutes road.

It is claimed that with this connection the road would have practically a down hill haul from this city to Portland, and a long distance could be saved. Not only would this proposed line of road eliminate much difficult trackage, but it would pierce a productive portion of the state that at present is without railroad facilities. That the road would be a paying proposition from the start is a conclusion that has been drawn from all calculations that have been made on the subject.

It is estimated that the proposed new line via Redmond would reduce the distance from Portland and the east nearly 100 miles. The curvature between Umatilla and Huntington would be avoided and many of the grades on that portion of the present line would be overcome.

The construction of this line would leave several important cities in Eastern Oregon, including Baker City, La Grande and Pendleton off the main road, but it is pointed out that the business of that portion of the state is developing so rapidly anyway that a train service equally as frequent as that now provided for through traffic will be required to handle the local freight and passenger business.

The Spokesman has always held that Redmond was the logical point for the Harriman system to connect with their east and west road, and the prediction may be verified before long.

Material for the construction of a large septic tank in the rear of the Hotel Redmond has been ordered, and as soon as it arrives work will be commenced. This mode of drainage is the best yet devised for towns or cities where there is no sewer system.

It is understood that the Crook County Water, Light & Power Co. owners of the power site at Cline Falls, on the Deschutes river four miles west of this city, is having plans made for developing the power at that point, and as soon as the plans are fully worked out machinery will be installed and a transmission line run from the Falls to this city.

The project as now outlined contemplates putting in machinery of sufficient capacity to generate enough power to supply all this section of the county with lights and power, and run a transmission line to Prineville, twenty miles from here, to supply that city also with light and power.

As a project of this kind takes some time in getting all the details worked out, it is estimated that the plant will not be ready for service before next fall or winter.

The Spokesman has it from good authority that this project is going to be put through by the above company, for they realize that there is a large field here to be covered, and with the unlimited power they can generate at a small cost, they see no obstacle in the way of getting the plant in working order as soon as possible.

It has been stated to The Spokesman that lights and power can be furnished at such a small cost, when the Falls plant is in operation, that no one can afford to be without lights in their business houses and homes. There are a number of concerns in Redmond that will take power as soon as the new system is installed and can get a 24-hour service.
