VICTOR HUGO'S KINDNESS.

Sarah Bernhardt Witnessed It and Hugged Him in Appreciation.

One day when the rehearsal was over an hour earlier than usual I was waiting, my forehead pressed against the window pane, for the arrival of Mme. Guerd, who was coming to fetch me. I was gazing idly at the opposite footpath, which is bounded by the Luxembourg railings. Victor Hugo had just crossed the road and was about to walk on. An old woman attracted his attention. She had just put a heavy bundle of linen on the ground and was wiping her forehead, on which were great beads of perspiration.

In spite of the cold, her toothless mouth was half open, as she was panting, and her eyes had an expression of distressing anxiety as she looked at the wide road she had to cross, with carriages and omnibuses passing each other. Victor Hugo approached her, and after a short conversation he drew a piece of money from his pocket, handed it to her; then, taking off his hat, he confided it to her and, with a quick movement and a laughing face, lifted the bundle to his shoulder and crossed the road, followed by the bewildered woman. I rushed downstairs to embrace him for it, but by the time I had reached the passage, jostled against De Chilly, who wanted to stop me, and descended the staircase Victor Hugo had disappeared. I could see only the woman's back, but it seemed to me that she hobbled along now more briskly.

The next day I told the poet that I had witnessed his delicate good deed. "Oh," said Paul Maurice, his eyes wet with emotion, "every day that dawn is a day of kindness for him." I embraced Victor Hugo, and we went to the rehearsal.—From Sarah Bernhardt's Recollections

Spaniels.

Spaniels, of which there are many breeds, are supposed to have first come from Spain, from which circumstance is derived their distinctive name. Charles I was an ardent admirer of a small variety of this animal, and from that arose the designation of his pets, known the world over as King Charles. Blenheim or Marlborough spaniels, which greatly resemble the latter in form and general appearance, get their English name from Blenheim palace, in Oxfordshire, where the breed has been preserved since the beginning of the eighteenth century.

Pat's Retort.

A one legged Welsh orator named Jones was pretty successful in bantering an Irishman, when the latter asked him: "How did you come to lose your leg?" "Well," said Jones, "on examining my pedigree and looking up my descent I found there was some Irish blood in me and, becoming convinced that it was settled in the left leg, I had it cut off at once." "By the powers," said Pat, "it would have been a very good thing if it had only settled in your head."

Looking Down a Well.

I never draw a pail of water from the well without an appreciation of its charm such as a country bred man, I imagine, could never feel. He might gaze at open plumbing, looking at it with his fresh country eye, where I should simply take it for granted, but I am afraid he never could fully experience what might be called the sentiment of a well, that delightful, inverted tower of darkness and dampness and coolth. If there isn't such a word as coolth there ought to be.—Atkinson Kimball in Atlantic.

Wasted Talent.

"Miss Goldbags—Caroline," began the suitor in nicely modulated tones as he extended his right hand and hitched up his left trousers preparatory to assuming the attitude prescribed by the best authorities as most suitable for such occasions, "as I humbly approach the shrine of your dazzling loveliness, like a poor moth beating his quivering wings against the ineffable brightness of"—

"Excuse me, Captain Cashless," gently interrupted the beautiful maiden, "but perhaps I ought to tell you that I accepted my cousin Fred last night."

For a moment the ardent wooer was dumfounded. Then he turned bitterly away.

"Then all I can say," he remarked, "is this: You've missed one of the most eloquent and carefully rehearsed proposals you ever listened to."—St. Paul Dispatch.

The Witches' Tree.

Country people speak of the elder tree as "the witches' tree" and planted it near farm buildings and dairies to keep off witches. They also say that the roots should never come near a well, still less grow into it, or the water will be spoiled. Frey's opinion was also unfavorable. He says: "I do by no means commend the scent of it, which is very noxious to the air."

"We learn from Blesius that a certain house in Spain, seated among many elder trees, diseased and killed nearly all its inhabitants, which, when at last they were grubbed up, became a very healthy and wholesome place." A cavity scarcely touch the elder, and the mole is driven away by the scent. Carters often place branches on the horses' heads to keep off flies. Nothing will grow well in the company of the elder, and when it has been removed and all its roots carefully grubbed up it is some few years before the ground becomes perfectly sweet and good for anything.—Borne's Magazine.
