REPORTS ON FOREST FIRES

State Forester Wants Notification of Fires When They Start

MUCH PROPERTY CAN BE SAVED

Urges Use of Phone to Get Quick Action on Incipient Fires

The State Forester is constantly getting notice through the daily press and from residents of the state of fires having gotten beyond control after several days fighting, that have not been reported to his office until after becoming a menace to the neighborhood. He wishes to urge upon all state fire wardens the necessity of reporting to him all fires as soon after being discovered as possible, instead of waiting until they become dangerous to life and property. One such fire has just been brought to his notice after having burned three weeks, that might have been controlled and probably entirely extinguished if reported earlier so that proper assistance could have been given.

Every state fire warden, or other persons, in case they are unable to get in touch with a state warden, should telephone or telegraph (collect) F. A. Elliott, State Forester, Salem, Oregon, informing him of forest fires before they get beyond control.

E. W. Pratt will fill the pulpit Sunday forenoon at the M. E. church.

A LITTLE DIP INTO SPACE.

Distances From Earth to Stars That Make Even Imagination Gasp.

One of the greatest sources of the fascination of the starry heavens is the measurelessness of their abysses. The ocean of space is so pellucid that we seem to see its spangled bottom, but trigonometry is powerless to reach it. Here and there only some projecting reef throws a star gemmed point within touch of the astronomer's sounding line.

Such a spire, situated at a depth hitherto unfathomed, has caught and arrested the spectroscopic plummet flung into the abyss by the astronomer Charles Nordmann, who has invented a new method of celestial soundings. The glittering star crag that he has hit is charted by astronomers under the name of Delta Librae, and the length of the mathematical line which now hangs between it and the earth makes the imagination itself gasp.

It is two quadrillions of miles!

It is only step by step that one can comprehend a number like that. Two quadrillions of twenty dollar gold pieces would make 100,000 necklaces, each long enough to embrace the earth and the moon in a double loop. An express train traveling 100 miles per hour and never stopping would require more than 2,289,000,000 years to go two quadrillions of miles. A projectile flying 3,000 feet per second, or in round numbers 50,000 miles per day, would require about 110,000,000 years to reach Delta Librae. Light, the swiftest thing known—the swiftest thing that can possibly exist, if we may trust recent calculations based on the phenomenon of radio-activity, and that can make the round of the whole earth more than seven times in a second—takes 355 years to come to us from that star.

Yet Delta Librae lies in shallow water. It is a gem cast up on a shoal, and all around it the mighty deeps of the ether descend to profundities unthinkable. At ten times, a hundred times, perhaps a thousand times, its depth glitter the star sands of the Milky way. To our telescopes they appear to lie on the very bottom, drifted into heaps and curves by mysterious currents, but it cannot be the real bottom even there. Beyond yawn abysses so black with excess of depth that the stars themselves, great suns that they are, fade to invisibility.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York American.

Disenchanted.

"Until I met you, Matilda," he murmured in a voice husky with emotion, "I believed that all women were deceitful, but when I look into your clear, beautiful eyes I behold there the very soul of candor and loyalty."

"George," she exclaimed with enthusiasm, "this is the happiest moment I have known since papa took me to the London oculist!"

"London oculist!"

"Yes, dear; you never would have known that my left eye is a glass one."

—London Answers.

The Taste For Horse.

Is our dislike of horseflesh simply prejudice? If we may judge from the experience of the inmates of the legations, which Miss Hooker recounts in "Behind the Scenes in Peking," the Anglo-Saxon can easily acquire the taste. "It is queer," she says, "to see how many people acknowledge that they like it, having eaten it now for two weeks. Of course, a great deal depends upon the animal, but they agree that mule and pony are better than horse. Some people, even, who have among their stores plenty of canned or tinned beef prefer the fresh horse meat."

Information Given.

A very pretty girl was standing in the hallway of her home several evenings ago, and the young man who had been calling on her was taking an affectionate farewell.

Just as he kissed her for the last time the irate father stormed down the hall and demanded to know what the young man "was trying to do."

The young man said he was "trying to look unconcerned" and then bolted.—Philadelphia Times.

Sometimes True.

The head master of a school recently put up a notice that on an early date he would lecture on the following subject: "Our Eyes, and How We See Through Them."

Shortly afterward he was astonished to find an alternative title written underneath:

"Our Pupils, and How They See Through Us."—London Stray Stories.

Did Not Work Both Ways.

Mr. George Jones, R. A., a painter of battle pieces, etc., who died some years ago, specially prided himself on his resemblance to the Duke of Wellington and used to dress up to the character. Some one mentioned the likeness to the duke and added, "It must be great, for people in the street often speak to him for your grace." "Very strange," muttered the great man. "No one ever spoke to me for Mr. Jones!"—Edmund Yates.

The Way He Wanted It.

"I would like to have my hair cut, please," he said as he threw himself into the chair.

"Any special way?" asked the barber.

"Yes," was the reply. "Off."
