HIS LITTLE BLACK PONY.

It Landed Its Owner in the United States Senate.

Judge William G. Ewing, at one time a well known lawyer of Quincy, Ill., and later a famous lecturer on Christian Science, told how James A. McDougal was made United States senator.

"When I was a boy and lived in Bloomington," said the judge, "McDougal was also a resident of that city and the owner of a handsome little black pony, which was a source of unending pleasure to all boys in the neighborhood, including myself. Scores of times I have seen five or six little fellows on his back at one time.

"Finally, of course, these boys grew up to be men and scattered, as boys will. Well, McDougal went west. Years afterward I chanced to be in Bloomington and attended a reception being given to McDougal, then United States senator from California.

"When I was presented to McDougal he looked at me very closely and then repeated by name several times, 'Ewing, Ewing—there were a number of Ewings, if I remember correctly.'

"I am William," I said.

"William?" replied McDougal. "I do not recall any William."

"But I was usually called 'Whig,'" I answered. "Don't you remember Whig Ewing, the one who used to ride your little black pony?"

"Well, I should say I do! Whig Ewing, come with me; I want to tell you something," and he drew me aside, saying: "I want to tell you how that little black pony made me United States senator. It was like this: The Democrats had a clear majority on joint ballot, and to be elected was just a matter of getting the Democratic nomination. I got within one vote of it, and there I stuck. My friends were willing to stay by me indefinitely, but it did not seem fair that I should hold them any longer than one more day, and I told them so.

"Among the Democrats who had not been voting for me was one Barnett, whom I began to fancy I had known long ago. That night about midnight I went to his hotel and found him in.

"'Didn't you once live in Bloomington, Ill.?' I asked.

"He said he did.

"'Very well. Do you recall a little black pony on which you and a lot of other boys used to ride?"

"He gave a quick answer in the affirmative.

"'And don't you recall McDougal as one of those boys?' I asked.

"He was on his feet in a minute and had me by the hands, and after looking at me for a moment he said:

"Now, you just go back to your hotel and go to bed! I'll do the rest."

"I followed his advice," concluded McDougal, "and that's how I came to be United States senator."

An Officer's Ready Wit.

An ancestor of Tolstoy's, an army officer, was an excellent mimic. One day he was mimicking the Emperor Paul to a group of his friends when Paul himself entered and for some moments looked on unperceived at the antics of the young man. Tolstoy finally turned, and, beholding the emperor, he bowed his head and was silent. "Go on, sir," said Paul. "Continue your performance."

The young man hesitated a moment, and then, folding his arms and reproducing every gesture and intonation of his sovereign, he said: "Tolstoy, you deserve to be degraded, but I remember the thoughtlessness of youth, and you are pardoned." The czar smiled slightly at this speech. "Well, be it so," he said.—London Globe.

Mrs. Newedd's System.

"John," said Newedd's mother, "I picked up Florence's account book this morning, and I must say I am disturbed over it. There are numerous entries of cash to G. K. W. Now, who is this G. K. W. your wife is giving sums of money to?"

"Oh, that's all right, mother. You see, Florence has a poor memory about expenditures, so whenever she comes out short she balances her accounts with G. K. W."

"And what in the world is G. K. W.?"

"'Goodness Knows What,'"—Boston Transcript.

Couldn't Do It.

"No use," growled Mr. Smith to his wife from the bathroom. "I can't do it."

"What is it, dear?" asked the wife in alarm.

"Why, the doctor told me this morning to drink hot water an hour before dinner for my indigestion. Here I have got a quart down, am nearly bursting, and I haven't been drinking fifteen minutes yet."—Ladies' Home Journal.

A New Naval Menace.

During the summer of 1907 the German armored cruiser Bremen visited Montreal, remaining a week or two, and many citizens took advantage of the opportunity to see what this sample of Germany's sea-going fighting machinery looked like.

Among them was one of Canada's budding civil engineers with a companion. They were particularly impressed by the massive and wicked looking solid steel ram that projected from the bow, coming to a point just at the water line.

They stood staring for some moments at this terrible beak, one of them pacing off on the wharf the length of the ram. Then as they sauntered away the young engineer voiced his pent-up feelings, "My, that would tear a fellow's pants, wouldn't it?"

Auto Party Made 700 Miles

The roads were good most of the way and in some sections they saw some very fine country. In the Paisley district, which is 1000 feet higher than around Redmond, they saw all kinds of fruit growing.
