THE IDEAL PLAN

"After having a bank account at the Redmond Bank of Commerce for several months, I am convinced I have struck the ideal way to save money.

"I deposit every pay day. I am not tempted to spend foolishly. I can have my money if I really need it. It is earning four per cent interest. The interest is added to the principal each six months. I do not have to worry about losing either interest or principal. The bank is accommodating and on several occasions has given me some excellent advice. I have saved more in a few months than in all the rest of my life.

"Many of my friends have started bank accounts. If any one asks me the best way to save, I say:

Always Digging Up

It seems that nearly everytime there is a mud hole in a county road within twenty miles of Redmond the citizens here are asked to contribute money to repair the same. And the citizens dig up the coin. It looks as if the county, with the high taxation that is assessed against the people, would be in a position to do her own improving of roads. The Redmond people have been digging up for the past two years for everything and anything that came along, and some of them are getting somewhat tired of going down into their jeans for spondulicks that by all rights the county should contribute toward putting the roads into passable condition.

Oil Famine Here

It is very seldom there is a famine of anything in Redmond, but the first of the week there was a gasoline and kerosene famine in the city. Merchants who deal in these commodities had been waiting for the arrival of regular freight here, and for a day or so the above articles were a scarce article. Ehret Bros. had a large consignment of gasoline at Opal City for delivery here, but the Jones warehouse people there let the whole consignment go to outside parties. In some instances it was necessary here to hold up automobiles and pan handle small quantities of gasoline from them for immediate use.

The merchants and business men of Redmond are working along lines to settle up this section of the county, and do not take it with a good grace when an outside "reformer" rushes in to print and states through the Portland papers that the county is "saturated with vice". Such a statement is a lie on the face of it, and does much to injure the settlement of the county.

A railroad company believes in doing things. When they want water for their road they get it, even if they have to dig a well down several hundred feet. That is what the Oregon Trunk line is going to do here. If cities would conduct their business somewhat along the same lines that a railroad company does the question of public utilities would sooner be solved.

Redmond is getting to be a city of lodges and secret orders. There five lodges here now and another one soon to be organized, as follows: Knights of Pythias, American Yeomen, Fraternal Brotherhood, Woodmen, Brotherhood of Owls, and a Masonic order will be installed in the near future.

You will now be safe in sending mail to Hillman addressed to the new name of the town which is Terrebonne. At least that is the way the railroad has it.

The Bend council has awakened sufficient to buy 500 feet more of fire hose for the fire department there. It is the old story of "locking the stable door after the horse is stolen."

Redmond will sure enough be a shipping point for freight for Prineville merchants, The Redmond Lumber & Produce Co. has a contract with thirty-one merchants of Prineville to handle their freight at this point through their warehouse.

A slam at this section of the state, holding it up as saturated with vice, as some of the "reformers" are doing, is mighty bad policy, and furthermore it is untrue. Nowhere in the state can a more law abiding city be found than right here at Redmond.

The grand jury that recently concluded its sessions at Prineville took a very sensible view of the situation when they recommended that incorporated cities run their municipalities themselves and not call in the help of the county officials.

And now that Redmond has a daily train service the next important thing to get is a direct train mail service and do away with the antiquated service that has obtained via Prineville for the past five years.

A good dairy run on business principles would be a good asset for Redmond.

Meeting of the Juniper Circle

A meeting of the Juniper Reading Circle was held Wednesday last at the home of Mrs. W. B. Chapman, most of the club members being present. The topic for the afternoon's discussion was "European Influence on Japan." Mrs. Herrick read an interesting paper in which she contrasted Buddhism with Christianity, and showed the influence of both religions upon Japanese life and character. Mrs. Norwood spoke of the results upon Japan of her policy of seclusion, the literary development and growth of imperialism. A short social session followed the literary program, and the club adjourned to meet Nov. 8th at the home of Mrs. J. A. Norwood.
