

EXPRESSED HIS IDEA.

Lincoln Voted the Objections to His Use of "Sugar Coated."

President Lincoln had a style of his own even in writing his state papers. It does not appear that he took pains either to secure or to avoid ornamental diction. He was, however, fond of homely but expressive phrases. For these he showed his preference upon occasion, as Mr. Lamon tells in his recollections of the man.

In one of his messages to congress Mr. Lincoln used the term "sugar coated." When the document was placed in the hands of the public printer, Hon. John D. Defrees, that officer was terribly shocked and offended. Mr. Defrees was an accomplished scholar, a man of fastidious taste and a devoted friend of the president, with whom he was on terms of great intimacy. It would never do to leave the forbidden term in the message; it must be expunged—otherwise it would forever remain a ruinous blot on the fair name of the president. In great distress and mortification the good Defrees hurried away to the White House, where he told Mr. Lincoln plainly that "sugar coated" was not in good taste.

"You ought to remember," said he, "that a message to the congress of the United States is quite a different thing from a speech before a mass meeting; that such messages become a part of the history of the country and should therefore be written with scrupulous care and propriety. Such an expression in a state paper is undignified, and if I were you I would alter the structure of the whole sentence."

Mr. Lincoln laughed and then said, with a comical show of gravity: "John, that term expresses precisely my idea, and I am not going to change it. 'Sugar coated' must stand! The time will never come in this country when the people will not understand exactly what 'sugar coated' means."

Mr. Defrees was obliged to yield, and the message was printed without amendment.

When Two Rainbows Are Seen.

When two rainbows are sometimes seen at once, one outside the other, the inner or primary bow, as it is called, is always the brighter, and the red band of color is always on its outside. The outer or secondary bow is much fainter in color, and the red band is always on the inside. This is because in the primary bow the sun's rays are reflected only once, while in the secondary bow they are reflected twice, which makes them fainter in color and turns them upside down. In one rainbow we see the rays of the sun entering the raindrops at the top and reflected to the eye from the bottom, while in the other we see the rays entering the raindrops at the bottom and reflected from the top, whence they reach the eye.

A Fit of the Blues.

When you find yourself in the possession of sundry blue devils, proceed to outdevil them. If they would have you go a mile go two miles. Put your will into it and see how blue you can be. Pretend you are a bluer blooded aristocrat than any of those that have come to visit. Be polite to them and let them entertain you. Do anything they bid you do. Sit down and mourn and wail to their hearts' content. Berate everything and everybody. Just try it. Blue devils are such contrary imps that they never stay long where they are well treated. Their good mission is to torment. A hearty welcome sends them flying—Nautilus.

Brides Priced.

To us it seems a curious whim on the part of our ancestors of the eighteenth century that in their marriage announcements they should so often choose and with such seeming complacency to enlighten the world with regard to the amount of fortune received with the brides. Here are two cases in point: "Mr. James Courts of Jeffrey's Sq., merchant, to Miss Peagram of Knightsbridge, £30,000." "W. Smith, gentleman, of the 2d Troop of Horse Guards, to Mrs. Ann Gardiner, a maiden lady, aged, 'tis said, near 70, with a fortune of £20,000."—Chambers' Journal.

His Picture Killed Him.

Among the Greeks the most famous painters were Cimon of Cleona, Polygrotus, Xeuxis, Apelles, Apollodorus and Parrhasius. Of these the greatest were Xeuxis, who is said to have laughed himself to death over the picture of an old woman that he had painted, and Apelles, who, according to some accounts, painted cherries so perfectly that the birds pecked at them, thinking them real. Apelles was a contemporary of Alexander the Great and was commanded by the conqueror of the world to paint his picture. His greatest work was "Venus Rising From the Sea," painted for the temple of Esculapius at Cos and costing, it is said, over $100,000. It is claimed that no artist was able to complete his unfinished pictures, many of which he left at the time of his death.

HIS LITTLE LINT.

The Amateur Hypnotist Had a Very Clever Experiment.

"Now, Maud," said Edgar, with a complacent smile, "I am ready to make that little experiment. I am sure I can bring you under the hypnotic influence if you will agree not to resist. Just put your eyes in a passive condition. Try to see nothing at all. Fix your eyes on that light now and don't forget to keep your mind a blank. I will count sixty seconds by my watch."

The girl followed directions literally, says the London Tit-Bits. In twenty seconds her eyes blinked; in forty they closed.

"Ah, I knew I would succeed!" exclaimed Edgar, highly elated. "Now, Maud, I command you to tell me the secrets of your heart. Whom do you love? Tell me, I command you."

A momentary expression of resistance crossed the girl's face; then she spoke in a monotone:

"I love Edgar Popham, and"—

"Yes, yes!" cried Edgar, trembling with delight. "Go on. Tell me all the secrets of your heart."

"I love Edgar Popham," continued the girl in the same tone, "and I would love him more if he were not so stingy. I want to go to the theater twice a week, and he takes me only once in three months. I want diamond rings, and he gives me rings with cheap stones in them. When I go out with him and get hungry he never thinks of oysters. When I"—

"Enough!" cried the young man. "Awake! I command you."

And he fled without waiting to see the result of his command.

As the front door slammed the young girl opened her eyes, smiled sweetly and said:

"I hope I did not spring too much on him at once. Perhaps I should have let the diamond rings and the oysters go till another time."

How Carnegie Got Library Idea.

Dr. Andrew Carnegie told an audience at Liverpool that he had "taken to library forming because his father did it before him." William Carnegie's efforts at library founding were, an Edinburgh contemporary points out, extremely modest as compared with the work of his distinguished son. In 1808 Mr. Carnegie's father was a journeyman weaver in Dunfermline. He and two other drivers of the shuttle met and agreed to convey the books they had in their respective homes to one house. The combined libraries figured out only twenty volumes. The pioneers were joined by other weavers, and they agreed to tax themselves to the extent of a few pence per month and from this fund purchase new books. The little institution ultimately blossomed into the Dunfermline Tradesmen's library.—Westminster Gazette.

On to His Job.

Railroad men are telling this incident as having occurred on a Kansas train some time ago: The rails spread and the engine, tender and baggage car left the track, but the jar was not hard enough to disturb the sleepers in the rear Pullmans. In the last Pullman the porter was shining shoes and, thinking the train was stopping at an unusual place, he went ahead to see about the difficulty. He was told that within a couple of hours the engine could be put back and the track repaired. So he got busy with his shoes again.

Suddenly a head popped out of one of the berths, and a man shouted:

"Sav, porter, what are we stopping here for?"

"Oh," answered the porter, "we had a wreck!"

"A wreck? Wow! Oh-oh-oh-wow-wow! My neck! My chest! My back! Oh-oh-oh!"—Kansas City Journal.

The Scottish Thistle.

The origin of the thistle as the national badge of Scotland is thus given by tradition. When the Danes invaded Scotland it was deemed unwarlike to attack the enemy by night instead of in pitched battle by day, but on one occasion the invaders tried a night attack. In order to prevent their tramp being heard they marched barefooted, and they had succeeded in creeping close up to the Scottish forces unobserved when one of them stepped on a thistle and uttered a cry of pain. The alarm was given, and the attack was beaten off. Out of gratitude the thistle was adopted as the insignia of Scotland.—London Chronicle.

Silence.

Silence is the element in which great things fashion themselves together, that at length they may emerge full formed and majestic into the daylight of life, which they are henceforth to rule. All the considerable men I have known forebore to babble of what they were creating and projecting. Nay, in their own perplexities do thou thyself but hold thy tongue for one day; on the morrow how much clearer are thy purposes and duties; what wreck and rubbish have these mute workmen within thee swept away when intrusive noises were shut out!—Maurice Maeterlinck.

Enjoying Bad Health.

"There goes Mrs. Whinger. She enjoys bad health."
"Did I understand you to say she enjoys bad health?"
"Exactly. Nothing gives her more pleasure than describing her symptoms."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Guard the Family Health

Health is often endangered by unsanitary cooking utensils. Physicians have found that cancer is caused by enamel ware chipping off and irritating the stomach.

If you have children or invalids in the family beware of cheap cooking utensils that crack, scale, peel off, tarnish and rust. Disease germs lurk in the worn places and there is further danger of tainting the food. Health is too precious to take risks with it.

Be safe. Use

"1892" Pure Spun Aluminum Cooking Utensils

which are guaranteed for 15 years constant service and will never spoil food nor endanger health.

This new ware is featherweight, beautiful, easy to clean—does not tarnish nor rust. The slight extra cost is more than made up by long service and absolute safety.

Look For Trade mark on Every Piece

The Maltese cross with the words Pure Illinois "1892" Aluminum—the original, insures that you get the genuine. There are imitations, so be sure this trade mark is on every piece.
