SPLENDID WORK OF EVANGELIST

C. F. WEIGELE DRAWS LARGE CONGREGATIONS AT THE M. E. CHURCH AND MAKES A NUMBER OF CONVERSIONS—13 TAKEN INTO CHURCH

The revival meetings at the M. E. church that have been conducted by C. F. Weigele since Sunday, January 14th, have been attended by large congregations. Meetings have been held each evening and most every afternoon since the 14th up to and including Tuesday night, January 23rd.

Mr. Weigele preaches the old time religion—a religion with no furbelows and frills on it, but a religion that brings one nearer to Christ. Many of the church members became sanctified through the work of the evangelist, and the eyes and hearts of others have been opened to the right kind of Christianity in a way they never before thought of.

Mr. Weigele is an evangelist of prominence, and it was mainly by the efforts of J. H. Cook that he was induced to come to Redmond.

Mr. Weigele is well pleased with the result of his labors here. From here he went to Prineville to hold several meetings.

Fifteen new members were taken into the M. E. church Tuesday evening as the result of Mr. Weigele's efforts.

POWELL BUTTES

January 15th.

The frost is out of the ground, the farmers are plowing, and it reminds one of spring time in this section.

Pearl Fulkerson moved in a big load of furniture the first of the week. Looks as though he intended to stay in Central Oregon.

Nicholas Apple and Geo. F. Beckman left the first of the month for Portland where they will attend Bible school the remainder of the winter.

Mr. Beech has been planting potatoes these nice days.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith have returned from Portland where they were snowed in for two weeks. Frank did not say just how he was snowed in, if by the elements or otherwise.

Geo. Hobbs is preparing eighty acres for potatoes.

Reeves Wilcoxen set two large traps for coyotes last week, and the first night he caught his dog, and the following night he caught John Reynolds by the foot. We did not suppose John could get his foot in No. 4 trap.

E. L. Johnson, our new merchant here, reports that his business is far greater than he had expected.

W. L. Titus of Tacoma, who is visiting his brother, L. F. Titus, here, is thinking some of starting a general blacksmith and wagon shop here. This is a business we are very much in need of.

The Pearson brothers have started a well on their ranch near here. C. H. Graves is engineering the work.

LAND AGREEMENT NOT YET SIGNED

A recent dispatch from Salem says: Although the essential features of the agreement between the Desert Land Board and the Central Oregon Irrigation Co. have been practically decided upon, it became evident at the meeting of the board held on the 20th that the actual signing of the agreement may be yet far away.

Verbal agreements have been reached on practically every part of the proposition between the Board and representatives of the company, but in some manner, written statements as to what these agreements really are do not seem to coincide with what is agreed on orally.

As a result, dickering is still going on as to the more minor points which, however, in many ways, the Board believes are essential to a final satisfactory settlement.

Very much indebted customer enters a butcher's shop, remarking, "I'll take a leg of mutton, and I want to pay for it."

"All right," replies the butcher, handing forth the meat, which customer takes and starts to go. "Look here," cries the butcher, "I thought you said you wanted to pay for it?" "So I do," was the reply, "but I can't."—London Telegraph.

A SOLDIER OF FORTUNE.

Marshal Brune, Who Was Killed by a Mob After Waterloo.

Marshal Guillaume Marie Anne Brune, one of the most prominent leaders of the great army of France, became a soldier in consequence of the sneer of a pretty actress. During the early days of the republic he had written a brochure on military operations, and one day, while dining with a party of Danton's guests, the publication was casually mentioned. One of the guests, an actress, addressed Brune mockingly in these words:

"You will be a great general, since you fight with a pen."

Stung to the quick, he applied for a commission and entered the army as a major. The witty actress, having wagged her pert tongue at Robespierre, was sent to the guillotine.

In the army Brune showed that will power can conquer natural nervousness. In his earlier battles he suffered tortures from the sight of blood and the noise of the guns.

Every discharge of a fieldpiece gave him such a shock in the pit of the stomach that he would have bent double with pain but for his will, which gave him power to stiffen his legs in the stirrups and throw his body back. When the battle was over his muscles remained paralyzed for hours on account of the tension to which they had been subjected.

He had a quick temper, which he mastered after many trials. While governor of the Hanse towns he gave certain orders which were not obeyed by the burgomaster of Hamburg. The official sought the marshal and began a long explanation. Now and then Brune, without saying a word, poured himself out a glass of water and drank it.

At length the burgomaster stretched out his hand for the decanter and said:

"Will you allow me?"
"Hold!" exclaimed Brune. "We had better ring for a fresh supply. I always pour down water when I feel a fire rising which might explode!"

Brune was massacred by a royalist mob at Avignon, after Waterloo, because of his opposition to Louis XVIII.

"Shout 'Live the king!'" cried the mob.

He refused.
"Shout 'Down with the emperor!'" called out the mob.

"The emperor is low enough now; this is not the time when I can say aught against him," was the spirited reply.

The enraged rioters answered this noble rejoinder by striking the marshal on the head with a shutter. He fell on one knee, exclaiming:

"To have escaped a hundred deaths for this!"

He was then killed by pistol shots, his body being dragged through the streets and flung into the Rhone.

Richelieu's Rise.

Statesmen who take their dismissal with humor are so rare that one of whom Mr. Blount-Burton tells in his book, "The Fate of Henry of Navarre," seems to merit further commemoration.

The Duc d'Eprouville had fallen into disfavor with King Henry. Descending the great staircase of the Louvre, he met Richelieu ascending.

"Is there anything new taking place?" the cardinal indifferently asked.

"Nothing," returned the duke, "except that, as you see, I am going down and you are going up."

A Change of Front.

Wife—How do you like my new hat?

Husband—The idea of paying big prices for—

Wife—Big prices! Why, I made it myself.

Husband—Um—yes—er—as I was saying, the idea of paying big prices for such monstrosities as the milliners are showing! Now, your hat is a work of art. Looks as if it came straight from Paris. Beautiful, my dear!—London Telegraph.

Sarcasm.

"Last summer I had a bully vacation," a bachelor friend of ours confided yesterday. "I met a bully girl the first day I was there, and she made it pleasant for me. Only once in awhile she was sarcastic. One day, for instance, we were out rowing, and I said, 'Do you know, I'm awfully fond of rowing?'"

"Are you?" she answered with a surprised note in her voice. "Then I should think you'd learn how!" —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Loss Their Freedom.

"All men are born free and equal," said the philosopher.

"I know," said the matter of fact person, "but some of 'em get married afterward."—Baltimore American.
