MARK TWAIN'S TRAMP.

And His Quiet Introduction in the Enterprise Office.

"It was the afternoon of a hot, dusty August day in 1832," says Albert Blagden in Harper's, "when a worn, travel-stained pilgrim drifted languidly into the office of the Territorial Enterprise, then in its new building on C street, and, tossing a heavy roll of blankets from his shoulders, dropped wearily into a chair.

"He wore a rusty slouch hat, no coat, a faded blue flannel shirt and a navy revolver. His trousers were hanging on his boot tops. A tangle of reddish brown hair fell on his shoulders, and a mass of tawny beard, dinged with alkal dust, dropped halfway to his waist.

"Aurora lay 150 miles from Virginia City—hard, hilly miles. He had walked that distance, carrying his heavy load.
 Editor Goodman was absent at the moment, but the other proprietor, Dennis E. McCarthy, sniffed that the caller might state his errand. The wanderer regarded him with a faraway look and said absently and with listlessly reflection:

"My starboard leg seems to be un-shipped. I'd like about a hundred yards of line. I think I am falling to pieces.
 Then he added: 'I want to see Mr.
 Harlow or Mr. Goodman. My name is Clemens, and I've come to write for the paper.'"

Too Late.

Daniel Webster used to tell a story about an old woman who was very ill and went into a trance. They all thought she was dead and when she opened her eyes her husband said in a surprised tone, "Why, Manly, we thought ye was dead!" The poor old woman looked at her husband a moment, and then she burst into tears.
 "And ye never bawled a bit," she sobbed. "Ye thought I wur dead, and yer eyes wur dry. Couldn't ye have bawled a little bit, Jabes?" The old man was deeply moved, and he did actually hawl then. But his wife said sadly: "It's too late now. Dry yer eyes. If I'd really been dead and ye'd bawled 'twould have done me some good. But it's too late now."

Insulting.

"Could you sing a ragtime song?"
 asked Mr. Lubrow.
 "Why, sir," spluttered the musician who takes himself seriously, "ye-ee-ee-found your D-b-bone headed impudence!"

"That's a good start," was the complacent rejoinder. "You have a fine idea of the words. Now see if you can put a melody to them."—Washington Star.

Unreasonable.

"Emma has such a sweet disposition?"
 "Has she? There isn't a shoe clerk in town that doesn't hate her."
 "Why?"

"She thinks they are all in a consider-ry to prevent her from wearing a No. 3 shoe on a No. 5 foot."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Conversational Strategy.

"I observe that you never contradict any theory that Mr. Heftybrane advances."

"Yes," replied Miss Carrene, "he's likely to get through talking much sooner if you don't break in and suggest new topics."—Washington Star.

Serious Drawback.

"I suppose every woman would like to be a Venus de Milo in figure."

"Not at all."
 "How can you say that?"
 "The Venus de Milo couldn't wear the present styles."—Washington Herald.

Her Chances.

Husband—You look badly today, my love. Is it that you are ill? Wife—No, John it's this last year's hat I'm wearing.—Harper's Bazar.
