DR. J. F. HOSCH IS NOW MAYOR

At the regular council meeting Tuesday night J. F. Hosch was elected mayor by unanimous vote of all the councilmen, to fill the unexpired term of Mayor Jones, resigned. C. N. Ehret was elected to fill Hosch's place on the council.

A typographical monotony of a paper printed here by J. M. Crenshaw, and called the "Oregon Advance" had strenuously opposed Mr. Hosch for mayor, and last week endeavored to show in its columns that Hosch was not the man for the position. The paper made the claim that Hosch had been councilman for a number of years but had never during that time tried to "clean up" the town. The charge was also made that Hosch was a Jones ring man, etc.

Crenshaw did not say anything about the failure of the other councilmen failing to "clean up" the city, though Roy A. Bush, one of the members of the council, is one of Crenshaw's followers; he tried to make Hosch the "goat."

The facts leading up to Hosch's election are as follows:

After the council accepted H. F. Jones resignation as mayor, Hosch, as president of the council, was acting mayor. Monday night, August 19th, a meeting of the council was called and representatives of the so-called "citizens league" or "reform league" were asked to attend to see if something could not be done in the way of settling the mayoralty question. At that meeting it was agreed that the "league" would put up a candidate for mayor, and that the business men of the city would also name one; that petitions for these candidates should be circulated, but no petition containing the names of less than 15 qualified electors would be considered or could be filed with the city recorder and go on the ballot for a special election to be held August 26th. This proposition was agreed to by both S. M. Collins, one of the "league," and Crenshaw, who is secretary of the "league."

Hosch was the choice of the business men of the city for mayor, and his petition was circulated and received 92 signatures in a short time, every business man in the city entitled to vote, with the exception of three or four, signing it.

The "league" people, it is understood, after circulating a petition for two days for their candidate, whoever he was, and securing but 17 signatures, saw they were hopelessly in the minority. Wednesday, Aug. 21st, Councilman Bush went to Hosch and said Jim Williams had come to him from the "league" people and they demanded that Hosch call a meeting of the council, and that the council appoint a mayor to be named by Crenshaw. This request was refused by Hosch, and the special election was held just to get the sentiment of the citizens of Redmond as to whom they desired for mayor and be a guide to the council in making the election.

At the election held August 26th the vote was as follows:

J. F. Hosch, 84.
H. F. Jones, 9.
Roy A. Bush, 2.
A. G. Allingham, 1.

The "league" people did not have a ticket in the field.

EXPERT TELLS ABOUT SMALL HOME ORCHARD

There is probably nothing that adds more to the home atmosphere of a farm than a few fruit trees and berry bushes. Still, in going over the country we notice that many of the new homes that are being established are without fruits of any kind either those that come into bearing early or those that we must wait several years before receiving returns. Yet there are few places where, with the proper care, hardy tree and bush fruits may not be grown. While they may not bear each year because of adverse climatic conditions, still they are ornamental and will give us fruit for home consumption occasionally, which means much where fruits are scarce. Still such small fruits as gooseberries and currants yield heavily each year, while strawberries and raspberries also do well. So with these small fruits bearing practically every year and an occasional crop of harder tree fruits there is no reason why each farmer should not have an abundance of fruit of one kind or other each year.

In planting a home orchard under our conditions, it is preferable, when so situated, to plant the trees on a north or northwest slope. Never set your trees on your lowest ground because of the added danger of frost. Always plant in your higher locations if they are so situated that you can give the trees proper care. This will give you less trouble with frost as the cold air naturally drains into the low places, and your high places are so situated as to receive the benefit of any air currents that may be in motion, and this also tends to prevent frost injury. In any case, give your trees as good a location as you possibly can as regards exposure, and always as deep a soil as you can with the above principles in mind.

Set your apple trees not less than 20 feet apart each way; pear and other fruit trees 25 feet apart each way.

Under our conditions, the selection of varieties is an important matter and nothing but the hardier ones should be selected. Do not make the mistake of selecting some much talked of varieties that may require entirely different climatic conditions than exist here, for if you do you can at best expect but inferior fruit while in very seldom not fruit at all. This pertains also to the bush and small fruits.

With our altitude and cold winters it is advisable to set the trees in the spring; fall set trees are apt to be winter killed. In setting the trees, cut back the longer roots, and others that have been broken off cut off with a sharp knife. Make the holes large enough to admit all the roots without their ends being bent upward. Set the trees several inches deeper than they were when in the nursery rows. If you have a prevailing wind, set the trees leaning slightly in that direction. Cut off the tree about two feet above the ground. Always where possible secure one year old trees as they can much more readily be made to take the desired form than older trees.

The selection of varieties is of much importance and often determines whether your planting will be a failure or success. Conditions as they exist over the greater part of this county call for hardy, northern grown, rather early varieties of apples. The Russian group fills these requirements quite well and include such varieties as the Astrachan, Yellow Transparent and Gravenstein. Other hardy varieties are Wealthy, McIntosh Red, Pewaukee, and possibly Rome Beauty. This gives a succession of fruit from the earliest till winter. The Crabs do well also.

H. F. JONES ROUNDING UP A FEW OF THE LIES

DETAILS OF THE DEATH OF FARLEY BUSSETT

To The Spokesman:
I am now engaged in rounding up a few of the lies that have been sent out from Redmond during the past two weeks about myself and the city administration by a so called band of reformers.

There having been so many unsavory rumors in circulation in Redmond about J. M. Crenshaw from places where he formerly lived, I have spent almost a week in looking up some of this record by personally visiting Oakesdale, Wn., and other places, as it has been pretty well understood that this man was principally responsible for the malicious slanders circulated about Redmond and some of her officials.

In the issue of the Portland Oregonian of August 15th, under a Salem heading: "West Explains, Fight Is Begun in Crook," this article among other things says: "As predicted in the Oregonian the governor has started his fight against Sheriff Balfour of Crook county and Mayor Jones of Redmond."

After reciting what Sheriff Balfour was charged with, the article continues with the following three statements concerning myself:

"It is further charged that Mayor Jones of Redmond, has declared that gambling will be tolerated in that town as long as he is mayor, that he has also declared that he has the district attorney with him and has nothing to fear on that score. Among other things it is also stated that the mayor has said in the event gamblers were arrested he would furnish their bonds."

Now, in order to prove to those who are unaware of conditions here and in order to show how far these so called reformers went with their slanders and lies, I hereby challenge the senders of the above statements to Gov. West to submit said proofs to the city council of Redmond, and on proof of same I will pay to said city council one thousand dollars for the public library of Redmond or any other charity the city council desires to use said money for.

I hereby denounce the above statements singly and as a whole as a lie made from the whole cloth, and made knowingly for the purpose of inducing Gov. West to declare martial law in Redmond.

In regard to the above statement and other libels published during the past ten days, both in Portland and Crook county, my attorneys have the matter in charge and a statement as what we intend to do, is premature at this time, but the public can rest assured that all legal steps will be taken to protect our interests.

Signed, H. F. JONES.

Powell Butte, Aug. 26, (Special.)
—Had not Lloyd Bussett an unusual amount of caution in his makeup he would not be alive today to tell of his cousin's, Farley Bussett, fatal fall down a cliff on Mt. Jefferson which resulted in his instant death.

E. A. Bussett, uncle of Farley Bussett, who had accompanied the boys on their trip to the huckleberry fields, had gone to the big lava beds, knowing from previous visits that many berries were to be found at that place. The boys on leaving camp that morning took an opposite direction in order to realize a wish expressed by young Bussett that he might write his mother in Oklahoma of his experience of picking berries and snow bailing on an Oregon mountain in August. After the boys had reached a high point and had tired of snow bailing they enjoyed themselves taking observations of the surrounding country, being able to see hundreds of miles in certain directions. The Coast Range showed up to good advantage from their point of view, and they could plainly see the Powell Butte farming section nestled at the foot of these young mountains. Finally tiring of this latter diversion young Bussett suggested sitting on the side of the precipice and timing a rock to see how long after starting it would send up the sound by which they could know it had reached the bottom of the almost perpendicular cliff Lloyd however, refused to do this, saying he preferred to keep a safe distance, at the same time turning to retreat a few steps just as his cousin loosened a rock with his foot, which, in its turn, seemed to liberate an avalanche of several tons of rock, each seeming to vie with the other in their race for the bottom, carrying with them their victim.

The last seen of young Bussett in life was as he threw up his hands to grasp something stationary, and falling to do so, was precipitated over the ledge. Realizing his awful position, yet thinking by some miracle his cousin might still be alive, Lloyd managed by almost superhuman efforts to reach the bottom of the cliff only to discover the lifeless body, broken and mangled among the rocks. To find his father who was some miles away, took good judgment as well as endurance. Lloyd found his father and they returned to the fatal spot where they were assisted by another berry picker to roll the mutilated body in a blanket, after which they lowered it over cliffs and carried it through almost impassable places to where a horse could be led to relieve them of their burden. A phone message to Redmond brought Mr. Bussett's car to a point 25 miles north of Sisters, where they changed the horses for the car and continued their homeward journey.

Farley Bussett was 22 years old, and leaves a father, mother and one brother to mourn his untimely death.
