$100,000 Worth of Food for U. S. Troops

Potatoes, Onions, Poultry and Butter and Eggs Have Been Ordered Sent to Mexico at Once

Food products to the value of $100,000 intended for the United States forces in Mexico are to be delivered at the navy yard by New York dealers at once. The contracts call for 65,000 pounds of potatoes, 25,000 pounds of onions, 34,000 pounds of frozen poultry, 40,000 pounds of butter and 20,000 dozen eggs.

FOREST NOTES

Apple wood is the favorite material for ordinary saw handles, and some goes into so-called brier pipes. New Jersey has a timbered area of about 2,000,000 acres, on which the timber is worth about $8,500,000 on the stump. It is mainly valuable for cordwood.

Many of the forest fires attributed to railroads are caused not by sparks from locomotives, but by the cigar and cigarette butts thrown from smoking car windows.

Port Orford cedar of the Pacific coast, recently tried as a substitute for English willow in the manufacture of artificial limbs, has been found unsatisfactory. While it is light enough, it is too coarse and brittle.

As an experiment, the supervisor of the Beaverhead national forest is stripping the bark from the bases of a number of lodgepole pine trees at various periods before they are to be cut for telephone poles. This stripping causes the trees to exude resin, and it is desired to find what effect this may have as a preservative treatment for the poles.

Western yellow pine cones, to the amount of 6,377 bushels, obtained on the Bitter Root National Forest, Montana, yielded 9,482 pounds of seed. The average cost of extracted seed was 41 cents per pound.

There is a considerable amount of yew in California, and makers of bows are seeking material there for archery sets.

Results from western white pine plantations, three seasons or more old, show an average of 97 per cent success. On an average white pine soil planting can be conducted for from $5 to $6 per acre.

Forest botanists recognize only one cypress in the United States. Its range extends from Delaware southward around the coast into Texas and up the Mississippi valley to Illinois and Indiana. It is one of the few cone-bearing trees which drop their leaves in winter. The heartwood of cypress is noted for its decay-resistant properties.

FOREST NOTES

The Chinese national conservation bureau is considering reforestation at the headwaters of Yellow river. The government report shows that this will ameliorate the torrents and cause a more regular flow from the now denuded uplands. It is acknowledged, however, that this reforestation may not have an appreciable effect within the lifetime of the present generation.

Last year the fire loss on the Canadian timber reserves was the smallest ever known, only 1-50 of 1 per cent of the area being burned over. Zentaro Kawase, professor of forestry at the Imperial University of Tokio, Japan, has been making a tour of the national forests of this country to learn the government's methods of selling timber and of reforestation.

More than 858,000 young trees are being set out this spring on national forests in Utah and Southern Idaho, and the season is reported as particularly favorable to their successful growth.

Armstrong Lake, within the Bear-tooth National Forest, Montana, is said to rival the famed Lake Louise of the Canadian Rockies. It lies at an elevation of 7,000 feet, surrounded by towering mountains. A good road which can be traveled in half a day by automobile connects it with the railroad at Billings. A rustic hotel has recently been completed and many trails make the surrounding region accessible.

No one will think of coming here." The girl rose. As she stood before her benefactress, she heard her murmur as if from afar-off. "Just about your size and figure," and wondered not a little.

"You may sleep late. I have many things to do and you will not be disturbed. Come, take off your clothes and get into my bed. Tomorrow we will plan further."

"But, madam," cried the girl, "I cannot take your bed. Where are you to—"

"If I feel like lying down, I shall lie there beside you."

The girl stared. "Lie beside me?"

"Yes. Oh, I am not afraid of you, child. You are not a monster. You are just a poor, tired—"

"Oh, please don't! Please!" cried the other, tears rushing to her eyes. She raised Mrs. Wrاندall's hand to her lips and covered it with kisses.

Long after she went to sleep, Sara Wrاندall stood beside the bed, looking down at the pain-stricken face, and tried to solve the problem that suddenly had become a part of her very existence.

"It is not friendship," she argued, fiercely. "It is not charity, it is not humanity. It's the debt I owe, that's all. She did the thing for me that I could not have done myself because I loved him. I owe her something for that."

Later on she turned her attention to the trunks. Her decision was made. With ruthless hands she dragged gown after gown from the "innovations" and cast them over chairs, on the floor, across the foot of the bed; smart gowns from Paris and Vienna; ball gowns, tea gowns, lingerie, blouses, hats, gloves and all of the countless things that a woman of fashion and means indulges herself in when she goes abroad for that purpose and no other to speak of. From the closets she drew forth New York "tailor-suits" and other garments.

Until long after six o'clock she busied herself over this huge pile of costly raiment, portions of which she had worn but once or twice, some not at all, selecting certain dresses, hats, stockings, etc., each of which she laid carelessly aside; an imposing pile of many hues, all bright and gay and glittering. In another heap she laid the somber things of black; a meager assortment as compared to the other.

Then she stood back and surveyed the two heaps with tired eyes, a curious, almost scornful smile on her lips. "There!" she said with a sigh. "The black pile is mine, the gay pile is yours," she went on, turning toward the sleeping girl. "What a travesty!"

Then she gathered up the soiled garments her charge had worn and cast them into the bottom of a trunk, which she locked. Laying out a carefully selected assortment of her own garments for the girl's use when she arose, Mrs. Wrاندall sat down beside the bed and waited, knowing that sleep would not come to her.
