SAVE THE GOOD JUNIPERS

Some people do not like to have juniper trees growing on their premises and pull them up when they begin to build or clear off their land for residence purposes.

There are some good looking junipers, and there are a whole lot of poor looking ones, too, the poor ones predominating. But when a person has a nice clean, bushy juniper tree growing on his place it seems a shame to cut it down or pull it up. A large juniper tree gives a good shade, and one peculiar thing about these kind of trees—no flies or mosquitoes are ever found around them.

There are many fine looking juniper trees in Redmond, some of them of very large size, probably hundreds of years old. The finest looking lot of these kind of trees in the city is growing in the rear of C. H. Baggott's place on North 10th street. Not a scrawny or scrubby tree can be found in the whole grove, which is something unusual for this variety of tree. On the corner of 6th and A streets there is a mammoth juniper that is as pretty a growing tree as one would want, and it makes a much nicer shade than could be obtained from many of the highly favored shade or ornamental trees.

Save the good juniper trees—you'll miss them in the future.

How many people read a local weekly newspaper is a question that very few people can answer, and this includes the publishers, also. But we know from actual knowledge that one copy of The Spokesman is read by nine different families. A subscriber told us that as soon as he got home with the paper from the postoffice, and before he or his family had read it, one of the neighbor's children would come over to borrow it. And the paper went from family to family. Probably by the time the ninth family secured the paper the print was nearly all read off from it. And nine families got all this for only $1.50 a year—and the newspaper man is the loser.

The Oregon Journal persists in saying that Joe Knowles, the man who has gone naked into the woods near Grants Pass, is a fake and will not subsist by his own efforts for 30 days in the wilds. The Oregonian, which is printing and featuring Knowles' dope on the first page of that paper, claims he is all right and will deliver the goods. Time will tell, as there are two professors watching Knowles do his stunt, and it does not stand to reason that these men will countenance anything in the nature of fraud on the part of Knowles.

The people of Harney county are putting up a great big kick about the poor mail service that obtains since the new mail contracts were let in July for carrying mail in that section. The Burns news says the service is simply rotten. How different the situation is there from what it is here. Here we have four mail trains daily. But never mind, Harney county, elect Bill Hanley to the United States Senate and he will be a great big factor in alleviating your mail situation.

If you know or hear of an interesting item in the community make it a point to see that it finds a place in the local paper. We will much appreciate your effort, and take means to ascertain or verify any lacking points. Anything which tends to brighten or better the news service of a paper makes it of so much more value to the community, and the subscribers are the ones mostly benefited thereby.

The telegraph last week told a story of 100,000 acres of wheat being destroyed by hail in the northern part of North Dakota. How different here—no bad storms or high winds that blow the crop out of the ground, but a climate, even with frosts, that year after year gives abundant yield of farm produce.

A farmer in the Silver Lake country put 60 acres into alfalfa and did not get a showing—hardpan too near the surface of the soil was the cause. Nothing like that happens in this country, but on the contrary three crops of alfalfa are harvested. Better come here to live if you want good results from farming.

A while ago a bunch of chicken thieves were caught here and put to work cleaning up the streets. More chicken thieves are operating in different parts of the city, according to reports, and here may be another chance to get more street cleaning done—if the thieves can be rounded up.

Do not be afraid that there will not be enough potatoes harvested in this section to make a good showing at the Fourth Annual Potato Show and Fair to be held here October 16 and 17. Just come to the show and you will be satisfied.

What has become of the Redmond baseball team? For a while, early in the season, Redmond ball players put up a good article of ball and the outlook was favorable for a three or four club league in the county.

Redmond merchants report that trade has been somewhat dull the past two or three weeks. The cause: All the farmers busy in the hay fields cutting their first crop of alfalfa and clover.

Three more months before general election. In about another month candidates will begin to get busy and work under high pressure until election time.

The "Four Years Ago" stories published on the first page of this issue will bring back to the minds of the people who were here then some pleasant recollections—when everything was booming in Redmond.

The heartfelt sympathy of the people of Redmond and this whole section is extended to Mrs. G. C. Truesdale of Powell Butte, in the sudden death at Tacoma of her daughter Viola, and the wounding of her other daughter, Pauline, as told in detail on the first page of this issue. Death came by accident, without warning, which makes Mrs. Truesdale's bereavement doubly sad.

The majority of Redmond people have the happy faculty of always looking on the bright side of things, and seeing prosperity in the coming future. Once in a while you will find a kicker, but their kicks don't ruffle the spirit of the go-ahead live wires here to any noticeable extent.

The severest kind of punishment should be meted out to the inhuman brute, in the guise of a man, who will beat a balky horse to death.

In addition to giving the President that white duck suit, Representative Byrnes should secure an appropriation to keep it laundered.

A more rational explanation is that Eve wanted to leave the Garden of Eden so she could see what the women outside were wearing.

Some learned institution has given Andrew Carnegie a new degree despite the fact that the canny one could well afford to buy it.

It now begins to look as if the Crook county farmer who harvests a good crop of potatoes will get a satisfactory price for them.

Between the big crops and the $700,000,000 oil lands decision the railroads ought to feel better before long.

During the heated term in Washington the president should permit congressmen to play on the White House lawn.

Are you getting ready for the Potato Show and Fair?
