KENDALL & CHAPMAN

CAN A WOMAN do as she pleases in her youth and by the strength of her will, the force of her determination, avoid the consequences? Can she, by laborious secrecy and tireless evasion, make the world judge her as the world judges men and not as the world judges women? Can she—once and once only—step beyond the bounds fixed by Society and resolutely step back without a penalty?

This great problem of a Woman's Will Against the World is the problem of The Woman—a problem only shadowy in the play, become salient and challenging in the intense, arresting story which Mr. Terhune has based upon the powerful de Mille play produced with such great success by Belasco.

WILSON SAYS NO DANGER

President Issues a Statement to Nation That All Will Be Well

ASKS NEWSPAPER MEN TO AVOID WILD RUMORS

Says National Government Can Take Care of Any Financial Difficulty That May Arise—Currency for the Banks

Washington, Aug. 3.—President Wilson appealed today to the people of the United States to remain calm during the war in Europe. He declared the United States owes it to mankind to help the rest of the world during the present crisis.

The president told callers today the United States had not directly or indirectly made any offer to use its good offices to bring about peace in Europe. He said he had not heard of a suggestion by the Queen of Holland that the United States unite with her country to offer mediation.

The White House authorized this quotation from the President's remarks to the Washington correspondents:

"It is extremely necessary. It is manifestly necessary, in the present state of affairs on the other side of the water, that you should be extremely careful not to add in any way to the excitement. Of course, the European world is in a highly excited state of mind, but the excitement ought not to spread to the United States. So far as we are concerned, there is no cause for excitement. There is great inconvenience for the time being, in the money market and in our exchanges and, temporarily, in the handling of our crops, but America is absolutely prepared to meet the financial situation and to straighten everything out without material difficulty. The only thing that can possibly prevent it is unreasonable apprehension and excitement.

"If I might make a suggestion to you, gentlemen, therefore, I would urge you not to give currency to any unverified rumor or to anything that would tend to create or add to excitement. I think that you will agree that we must all at the present moment act together as Americans in seeing that America does not suffer any unnecessary distress from what is going on in the world at large. The situation in Europe is perhaps the gravest in its possibilities that has arisen in modern times but it need not affect the United States unfavorably in the long run. Not that the United States has anything to take advantage of, but her own position is sound and she owes it to mankind to remain in such a condition, and in such a state of mind that she can help the rest of the world."

Money for Americans
 Washington, Aug. 3.—The Emergency Shipping Bill to waive restrictions on American registry for foreign built ships, with a view to preventing a paralysis of trans-Atlantic trade, was passed today in the House without a roll call, and was taken at once to the Senate.

The House passed a $250,000 appropriation bill without debate or roll call. The measure was urged by President Wilson to get Americans who are in Europe back home.

Uncle Chet's Advice.
 Uncle Chet Thomas was a famous Kansas politician of the early days. Once, when he was in the Kansas legislature, a man interested in a certain bill offered Uncle Chet $100 to help the bill along.

"Never you mind about that," said Uncle Chet. "I don't want your money, and, besides, don't you never try to buy a politician. When you want to buy anybody, buy an honest man—he'll stay bought, but a politician has a record to maintain!"—Saturday Evening Post.

He Meant Well.
 The company was mostly medical, and a little discussion arose about the conduct of another doctor who always had afternoon tea served to patients who called between 2 and 5. Some of the younger doctors were indignant and asked if the next thing would be free lunch counters in the surgery. But the oldest doctor smiled cheerfully. "Don't you worry about him. Any man who encourages the public to eat or drink between meals is, consciously or unconsciously, a benefactor to our profession."—Manchester Guardian.

A Musical Sense.
 "Mother," said the small boy at the piano, "may I quit practicing for a while?"
 "Why? Are your hands tired?"
 "No; my hands aren't. But my ears are."—Washington Star.

A Thrifty Emperor.
 So ingrained were the habits of economy with the old Emperor William that even after he had assumed the imperial crown they never deserted him. The emperor gave the example. He always extinguished the candles himself and lowered the lamps before he left any room. When an village at Ems or Baden, guests invited to join the emperor at dinner at some restaurant were often embarrassed at the end of the meal to discover that it was a "pay party."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Taking Him Down.
 Of a certain attorney his younger rivals relate the following amusing anecdote. "The better told in the ancient anecdote style, too and also.

One day the office bell sent forth a shrill jangle, and the office boy hastened, in as far as haste was in him, to answer it. After a suitable interval he re-entered the inner office and said: "A client wishes to see you, sir."
 "An old client or a new one?" asked the lawyer.
 "A new one, of course," answered the boy.—New York Globe.
