

City Council approves $283K for downtown parking lot

Bulletin staff report

A Redmond City Council vote Tuesday night was the final bureaucratic step in transforming a blighted patch of downtown Redmond into 36 parking spots.

The City Council — acting as the Urban Renewal Agency Board — unanimously approved a $282,906.30 contract to build a parking lot with Redmond contractor McKenzie Cascade at a recent board meeting.

The lot will be built at the northwest corner of NW Fourth Street and SW Evergreen Avenue, only two blocks away from Redmond's main downtown strip.

The city purchased the vacant land in September 2019 with the intention of building the parking lot, city documents state.

Not only would the project add more parking to downtown Redmond, but it would also add a sidewalk along Fourth Street, between Evergreen and Deschutes avenues, city documents state.

The city expects construction on the lot to begin in March, with parking available by June.

Redmond man accused of sexually abusing girl

Bulletin staff report

A Redmond man was charged last Wednesday with five felonies for allegedly sexually abusing a girl younger than 12.

Adam Gordon Lovett, 35, was arraigned in Deschutes County Circuit Court on four counts of first-degree sexual abuse and one of first-degree unlawful sexual penetration. He was listed as an inmate of the Deschutes County jail with no bail amount set.

According to Lovett's indictment, he abused a girl over three dates in 2020 — July 1, Aug. 1 and Nov. 25. Last Tuesday, a grand jury approved the current charges against him.

He has a plea hearing scheduled for next month.
