Coronavirus update: Surge in Redmond

Coronavirus cases climbed dramatically across Oregon for a fifth consecutive week, according to the latest state data, tripling from the levels of mid-March. The Oregon Health Authority reported 5,729 confirmed or presumed infections for the week ending Sunday, April 25, up 21% from the previous week. New cases slightly outpaced the increase in week-to-week testing, which stood at 17%.

If there's solace, it appears that the week that ended Sunday, May 2, is not on track to see such a high growth rate. In fact, there's a possibility the weekly case count stays roughly flat or even declines.

In the previous week, ZIP codes in Central and Southern Oregon recorded the most new cases, while parts of the the Portland area and Salem also posted high numbers. The Oregonian monitors state coronavirus data, reporting by ZIP code the areas with the greatest weekly changes.

97756: Redmond: This ZIP code added 145 cases, raising its tally to 2,075. That's the 17th most in Oregon and 73rd most per capita since the start of the pandemic. This ZIP code also recorded new confirmed or presumed infections of 37 per 10,000 people during the same week, up slightly from the previous week.
