

Bookshelf: Explore themes of family, identity and friendship

BY JOSIE HANNEMAN
Community Librarian

Deschutes Public Library hosts an annual community reads program called A Novel Idea.

This is our second year of having a companion youth program. Our 2022 community read pick is "I Can Make This Promise" by Christine Day. During the month of April we will have several programs related to the book, culminating in author talks in early May. For further information, programs, discussion guides, and more, visit our website: <https://www.deschuteslibrary.org/calendar/novellidea/>.

If you've read "I Can Make This Promise", and the themes of family, identity, and friendship resonated with you, check out these other great books.

"The Sea in Winter" by Christine Day

When an accident forces Maisie to abandon her dream of becoming a ballerina, she is not enthusiastic to take a family road trip. Visiting areas in the Olympic peninsula, and learning about her mother's childhood in a Makah community, helps to bring some healing.

"Forever, Or a Long, Long Time" by Caela Carter

Flora and Julian have spent years in the foster care system. When they are adopted into a forever family, and a new baby is announced, they struggle to trust that they have found their true home.

"A Good Kind of Trouble" by Lisa Ramee

Shayla has always been a rule follower, trying to be a good person and forge ahead within the system. When her sisters gets involved in Black Lives Matter, though, she begins to understand that what you are supposed to do is not always what is right.

"A Place to Belong" by Cynthia Kadohata

Following the end of World War II Hanako and her family leave the United States after their internment in government camps. They settle in Japan, near her grandparents, and near the devastation of Hiroshima. For Hanako it is a move to a land she's never experienced, and finding her place in the country, and in her family, challenges her resilience.

"Indian No More" by Charlene Willing McManis

In the mid-20th century, the U.S. government terminated its trust relationship with many tribes, effectively disbanding them and removing any protection for their reservations and land ownership, though these had been promised in treaty after treaty. This happened to Ore-gon's Umpqua Tribe in 1954. The effects were widespread, but this book focuses on Regina, whose family moves from Oregon to Los Angeles, creating challenges of identity and belonging in the foreign, new environment.

"The Other Half of Happy" by Rebecca Balcárcel

Quijana feels half American, half Guatemalan; there's a boy at her school who is half a friend and half a crush; at home she gets to be a kid half the time, and has to be an adult the other half. Can all these halves make a whole person?

Chamber makes Redmond caves priority project in 1947

100 YEARS AGO

April 23, 1922 — Radio set to arrive in about three weeks

M.A. Lynch, of the firm of Lynch & Roberts, returned from Portland Saturday, where he had been for several days arranging for the purchase of a radio set which will be installed in the big store for the use of the public.

Mr. Lynch informs us that it will be about three weeks before the outfit can be installed.

75 YEARS AGO

April 24, 1947 — Chamber makes Redmond caves priority project

Members of Redmond Chamber of Commerce decided to make the development of Redmond caves a priority project at their Tuesday noon meeting.

Lester Houk, acting as chairman in the absence of the regular officers, chose to appoint a "commission" rather than just a plain committee to do the job.

It was brought out in the discussion that a road could easily be built into the caves from the railway, and that the state park commission years ago had expressed interest in making the caves into a state park.

Because of the nature of the terrain, it was also brought out, it is very probable that there are more caves in the area than just the two that are known. It will be the cave commission's job to obtain equipment, and perhaps blasting materials, and conduct an exploratory program. Houk appointed Joe Brown to head the project, and named George Taylor, Justin King and Dr. Hal Rogers to serve as other members of the group.

April 19, 1972 — Modern magician coming for show

Reams the Magician will present his famed "Magic in the Modern Manner" on Saturday to highlight the Central Oregon Home and Sport Show.

The three-day show will feature a wide range of indoor and outdoor displays at the Bend Armory.

Drawing for the grand prize will be at 5 p.m. Sunday, with other prizes to be awarded all three days. A food booth will be maintained by the Jayceettes, announces the sponsoring Redmond Chamber of Commerce.

Redmond exhibitors are Grover's TV and Radio Sales and Service, Frank Murrell Plumbing, Pacific Power and Lighting Co., Cent Wise Sporting Goods, Peltier and Wakefield Appliances, Wright Ford, Frank Rencher's Coyote Camper, Jonas Chevrolet, Tim Satterfield's Photogra-

Spearheading the event are Glenn Stevens, chairman, Howard Milton, Vern McGowan, Dave Teater, Lannis Sellers and Ed Sturza.

25 YEARS AGO

April 23, 1997 — Council divided over vacancy

Majority of city council members disagree with Mayor Jerry Thackery's decision to appoint an outside committee to select a nominee for interim city manager.

In a heated meeting Tuesday night, counselors Jan Anderson, Randy Povey, Bob Green and Duane Gilbert opposed the mayor's intention to find a nominee by using an advisory committee he alone created.

Mike Newell and Elaine Young defended Thackery's process for replacing city manager Joe Hannan while Hannan is on a peacekeeping mission in Bosnia for six to nine months, starting at the end of May.

"It's probably one of the most critical, vital decisions we can make," Anderson said. "I'm uncomfortable not being involved."

"At least the council deserves the right to go over the résumé of prospective people involved," Green said.

Although the city charter does not address the issue, a supporting ordinance does allow the mayor to appoint the city manager with approval of the council.

The committee consists of former mayor Bob Riggs, former city councilor Jane Schroeder, civic leader David Bishop and Phyllis Sturza, owner of Ericksen's stationary.

Other counselors argued that they should be involved in reviewing candidates for the position.

"It's kind of like an ambush, and we agreed not to do that," said Povey, who then polled the council, asking who would not want to be involved in interviewing candidates. "There's your committee," he said of the majority who want to be involved.

That prompted Young to fire back: "You're not the mayor, don't appoint committees."

The meeting ended without consensus on the process, but Hannan said later he believes the mayor and council will work toward a compromise this week.

"They've got to," said Hannan, an Army Reservist. "I'll be leaving in about five weeks."
