Aug. 27, 1997 — City requests second audit covering Falcon Cable fees

The Redmond City Council is turning up the heat on Falcon Cable over local cable TV service.

Still awaiting an independent analysis of the company's compliance with service requirements, the city has asked for a second audit to assess Redmond franchise fee rates. Redmond cable rates are the highest in Central Oregon.

In addition, the city council on Sept. 23 will consider an ordinance to strengthen the city's "weak franchise agreement with Falcon," interim city manager Vergie Ries said in a letter to Ruby Sutherland, Falcon's Redmond operations manager.

On the same day, the city council will discuss a request from Falcon to transfer the local cable franchise to an affiliated partnership based in Delaware.

Mayor Jerry Thackery has requested that a "representative with decision-making authority" attend the Sept. 23 meeting. Counselors expect to see the results of the technical audit on franchise compliance prior to the meeting.

"We'll just see if they want to be a partner or not," said City Councilor Mike Newell.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Church held an ice cream, coffee and cake social on the lawn of Mrs. James Toney last Saturday evening, which was fairly well patronized. The weather turned quite cold during the latter part of the evening, which caused the sale to slow down to a considerable extent; otherwise the affair would have proven a big success financially, but as it was, the ladies netted a neat sum.
