Sept. 21, 1922 — Agent commended for wrecking train

E.D. Woodbury, now acting as relief agent for the Spokane, Portland & Seattle Railway at Goldendale, Wash., has received a personal service letter from the officials of the Oregon Trunk Railroad commanding him for quick thinking and prompt action in opening a mainline switch and side tracking 34 runaway freight cars in Redmond last month.

The collision caused a $40,000 wreck loss for the company, but the letter says that the prompt action on the part of the agent no doubt prevented a much more serious accident and the possibility of loss of life.

Sept. 25, 1947 — State inspector position taken by Killingbeck

Clarence Killingbeck, who has been with Central Oregon Cooperative Creamery in Redmond since 1928, has accepted a position as dairy and food inspector for the state department of agriculture, it was announced this week.

Killingbeck's territory will include three eastern Oregon counties and he will begin his new work October 20, spending a month in Salem before going to his district.

For a number of years the state department of agriculture has been offering the position to Killingbeck, who is well known for the top quality grade "A" butter he has turned out as butter maker for the creamery.

Killingbeck owns a home and acreage in the Dobson Slocum addition, which they are keeping and have rented. They also own a small tract of land at Culver, which Killingbeck thinks will develop as dairying country. Mrs. Killingbeck and daughters, Clarence and Carolyn, will remain here for a time.

Killingbeck, who has many friends in Central Oregon, says that he hates to leave but cannot turn down the advancement. He will inspect restaurants, stores and dairies in connection with his new position.

Sept. 27, 1972 — Kiwanians reveal drive for new pool

The Redmond Kiwanis club, which more than 30 years ago was the driving force behind a successful movement to make Redmond the first community in Central Oregon to have a real swimming pool, has announced plans for a project aimed at giving Redmond the first year-round covered pool in the Tri-County area.

President Vernon Patrick and president-elect Art Proctor have named an 15-man committee of Kiwanians to spearhead the community service project and steering, planning and fundraising capacities. Serving in advisory capacities will be city administrator Ed English and councilman Bernie Lockman, representing the city; directors Kieran Madden and John Halstead, on behalf of the Redmond School District, and others yet to be named.

Undertaken the first of September, the project is still in the information seeking and planning stages, with location, design, cost, methods of financing, timetable for construction, responsibilities for operation and other details to be announced after further investigation.

Currently Kiwanians are contacting all possible resources for federal financing, reviewing various plans and pools and making personal visits to community groups to ascertain their interest in the project.

Sept. 24, 1997 — Negotiators return to table

The Redmond School District and the teachers union returned to the bargaining table Tuesday for the first time since the two groups hit a stalemate in early August.

A new contract offered by the district initiated the meeting, Superintendent Jerry Colonna said.

Members of the bargaining team are considering the proposal and will respond later this week. Colonna outlined four possible directions negotiations could take: the teachers could reject the offer, accept the proposal, counter offer or request another mediation session.

Negotiations between the district and the classified employees, which include secretaries, custodians and bus drivers, also are at an impasse. Money, which is holding up certified bargaining, also is the issue for classified workers. Negotiators have yet to agree on salary, benefits, paid holidays and job descriptions.

A mediator has been requested and the next classified bargaining session will be in October or November.

People in Redmond are being crushed by rising gas, food, and housing prices. As your City Councilor, and a local small business owner, I understand this skyrocketing cost of living is unsustainable for families and businesses alike.

As your City Councilor today, and with your vote in November, I will continue to work to create more affordable housing and job opportunities in Redmond.
