F. SILHAVY'S Wagon and Paint Shop into its channel long stretches of the loveliest of flats teeming with insect life, a very paradise for those devoted to that kind of game. Ethelinda was in raptures over the prospect, and no sooner had the sun established a safe footing over the treacherous waste than she was daily to be seen in the little boat, propelled by the professor, hurrying to the desired fields.

This went on for a week, and everything was lovely. But one day in midstream the little boat sprung a leak. Ethelinda would not believe it until the water was half way to her suce tops. So faithful, so stanch a craft to go back on her so! But there was nothing for her but to make land as juickly as possible, and from that point the shore seemed perilously far way. Ethelinda would have fallen flat in three feet of water, but the professor could, if need were, swim like a duck, and now there was urgent call for all his science.

By stuffing his soft hat into the rent at the bottom of the boat (Ethlinda proffered hers) the river was oeld in abeyance, but this was cleary only a makeshift. Any, moment heir frail vehicle might fail them. and then what? Why, the swift curent of the remorseless stream, which would snatch them away from life and light forever, and bury them athoms deep in sand and unsightly lebris.

Ethelinda thought of this for one lreadful, agonizing moment, then she became aware of the professor speakng, and she made a desperate effort o listen to what he was saying.

He was telling her in calm, even tones that there was no immediate danger, that even if the worst came to the worst he could swim with her to shore, provided she remained calm, and did exactly as he told her to do.

White and rigid, she promised, thou, h in her heart she saw very little hope.

The professor was, on the contrary, almost gay. He plied the oars vigorously, humming a lively tune, though the water in the boat continued to increase alarmingly. To Ethelinda it seemed an eternity before the middle current had been cleared and shallower space reached.

Then, without a moment's warning. the boat filled, and they were up to their waists in the river. Ethelinda. forgetting her resolution, screamed and clung to the professor, but that gentleman, having had the presence of mind to seize an oar as he went overboard, steadied nimself by it, for he would save her if he himself free. perished in the attempt.

Fortunately at that point the river pools and marshes, smiled on slugs bottom was firm; some good genius had surely directed their course, and after the first shock Miss Grayson recovered her courage somewhat. There was danger, to be sure, but the serenity with which the professor faced it shamed her fears, and she let him put the professor of belles-lettres in the university. He had long worshiped at his left arm around her waist to sup-Ethelinda's shrine, and had always port her, while with his right he assisted their struggling steps toward the shore. By merest chance Jack Melvin had taken a spin on the water that morning, and while the professor and Ethelinda were rescuing themselves from shipwreck was watching them from a clump of bushes on the banks. A four-oared boat was moored near by, though what he might want with four oars, going up stream, too, was not clear.

Sciatic Rheumatism Cured.

"I have been subject to sciatic rheumatism for years," says E. H. Waldron, of Wilton Junction, lowa. "My joints were stiff and gave me much pain and discomfort. My joints would crack when I straightenek up. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and have been thoroughly cured. Have not had a pain or ache from the old trouble for many months. It is certainly a most wonderful liniment." For sale by Brewer Drug Co.

commented the passing stranger. "Dat's what it looks like," returned Weary Willie, "but 'tain't so soft as it looks. W'y, a feiler can't lie in the shade of a tree more'n an' hour or two afore the shadow shifts an' he has to move over to keep in it." -Chicago Post.

A Great Sensation.

There was a great sensation in Leesville, Ind., when W. H. Brown of that place, who was expected to die, had his life saved by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. He writes: "I endured insufferable agonie sfrom Asthma, but your New Discovery gave me immediate relief and soon threafter effected a co.nplete cure." Similar cures of Consumption, Pneumonia, Bronchitis and Grip are numerous. It's the peerless remedy for all throat and lung troubles. strongly disapproved of her mental vagaries, but this last one was too much for his patience, already sadly frayed. He resented with fierce disgust the new rivals that had come between him and his love. For though he had been told repeatedly and latterly in tones unmistakably acid that there was no hope, he still persisted in his pursuit, convinced that faint heart never won fair lady, and spending much precious time in devising ways and means for the subduing of obdurate hearts.

Ethelinda was the valedictorian of the graduating class of that year, and is such had the opportunity of her life presented to her. She dared an innovation and won. Departing from the platitudes made and provided for such occasions, she made no allusion to the alma mater from whose sheltering arms the class was about to take its plunge into the cold, raw world without, but instead gave her audience a little lecture on bugs, and joyously predicted the day when they would be served up, metaphorically speaking, morning, noon and night at every table in the land.

Some of her hearers clapped in approval, some smiled in derision, but on the whole it was very well taken. Only the professor of belles-lettres shuddered as he listened, and inwardly made still firmer resolves to win was worth saving from the slough of absurditiy in which she was wallowing, and he would be her savior.

The professor had concocted a plan and the blessed vacation time coming to his aid, he threw himself into it Miss Grayson's hobby, and after the Herod in his zeal. He went everywhere with Miss Grayson, carried the implements with which she reaped her wriggly harvest, mounted specimens for her, though the soul within him revolted, and in a thousand ways made himself indispensable. "He is really quite usefui,' Ethelinds acknowledged to herself. "I don't know what I should do without him." But there came a time which, though Ethelinda was unconscious of it, was the crisis, the turning point of all her days. The river that ran by the town had the habit of overets, leaving behind in getting back cured. Only 25c, at all druggists.

"Hello, professor," he shouted, "what are you and Miss Grayson doing out there? You'll get wet if you don't mind."

"Is that you, Jack?" shouted the professor in turn. "Fetch out your boat if you have one and help us out of this beastly fix. Upon my honor, we've had a close call."

Ten minutes later the four-oared boat had justified its presence and Ethelinda, seated in the stern, was wringing the water from her drenched skirts and warmly thanking Jack Melvin for his timely assistance.

"Don't mention it," said Jack, "the professor had already rescued you when I appeared on the scene."

"Yes," replied Miss Grayson, blushing crimson. "I owe my life to the professor, and I shall always be grateful to him for the favor."

At the wedding a month later Jack Melvin was best man, and after the ceremony he kissed the bride, shook the audacious speaker. Ethelinda hands with all the guests in defiance of etiquette and otherwise distinguished himself. And while concentration was concentrated upon Miss Grayson that was, he held a short conference with the professor, in which he seemed to allude to heart and soul. With awful mendac- certain dark and mysterious transity, he declared himself a convert to actions known only to those two. These transactions must have been of manner of converts he out-Heroded a peculiar nature, for neither Jack nor the professor smiled, though their eyes danced, and the warm hand clasp of both in good-by, and the professor's hearty "God bless you, my boy," gave no clew to their meaning.
