About Alfalfa.

After a thorough investigation the S. P. company believes that the dairy industry of the Willamette Valley can be made more profitable, and the production greatly increased, through the growing of alfalfa.

While many attempts have been made in the valley to grow alfalfa, and in some places with commercial success, yet the valley can hardly be classed as a producer of alfalfa as a crop. Therefore the Southern Pacific Company proposes, in different parts of the Willamette Valley, to plant 20 or more tracts in alfalfa and endeavor to cultivate it successfully.

The object to be attained is, first, to determine under what conditions and in what sections of the valley alfalfa can be grown successfully; and second, to give as wide publicity as possible to the results attained, that farmers interested may have the value of their experience where desired.

Mr. W. W. Cotton, who has had much practical experience in alfalfa culture, is preparing a pamphlet upon this subject. If any of our readers are interested, Mr Cotton's pamphlet will be mailed to anyone sending his address to Mr. Paul Shoup, Worcester Building, Portland, Oregon.

The market for dairy products is practically unlimited so far as Oregon is concerned, since condensed milk, butter and cheese can now easily be transported for long distances. The movement of butter and cheese during the 12 months ending June 30th last from Puget Sound to Alaska amounted to 1,339,000 pounds.
