Fame.

Fame is the inheritance not of the dead, but of the living. It is we who look back with lofty pride to the great names of antiquity, who drink of that food of glory as of a river and refresh our wings in it for future flight.—Hazlitt.

But for some trouble and sorrow we should never know half the good there is about us.—Dickens.

THE FLAG AFLOAT.

Intricate Etiquette of the Stars and Stripes in the Navy.

The etiquette of the stars and stripes aboard United States naval ships is almost hopelessly intricate to outsiders, writes Katherine E. Thomas in Joe Chapple's News-Letter. Rigid ruling of life aboard ship requires every officer or man on reaching or leaving the quarter deck formally to salute the national ensign, which salute must be as formally returned by the officers of the watch at hand.

All officers and men, however, must stand at attention whenever the "Star Spangled Banner" is played unless engaged at the time in some duty that absolutely prohibits their doing so. This respect must be paid to the national air of any country when an official representative of that country is aboard ship. Nor does the courtesy cease at this, for at morning and evening colors all pulling boats when passing near a foreign man of war must lie on their oars, and the coxswain salutes, standing to face the colors in his salute, and steamers must stop their engines.

When a foreign ship of war enters a harbor or passes a fortification it is customary to hoist at the main the flag of the country whose waters it visits and to salute it, and the nearest fort or battery returns the salute. When a foreign warship is in United States waters and fires such a salute it is returned exclusively by the nearest battery, the United States ships remaining silent.

Under no circumstances is a salute permitted from a United States vessel in honor of any nation or any official of a nation not formally recognized by the government of the United States, and no ship of the navy is permitted to lower her sails or dip her ensign unless to return a courtesy. On the other hand, when passing or being passed by a foreign ship of war at close range all officers and men on deck are required to salute the foreign flags and the sentries to present arms.

BURNS IN THE RAIN.

Proper Way to Build a Campfire in Stormy Weather.

There are several ways of building a campfire that an ordinary rain will not put out. This is one:

Lay two sticks on the ground parallel with each other and from two to four times as far apart as the diameters of the sticks. Across these two lay two more, as if you were starting a cob house. If necessary drive stakes into the ground to keep the sticks in place.

For the next story of the cob house use only one stick and place that on the side on which you are to be when the fire is burning. These five sticks may be green. Dry wood makes a better fire, but it needs rebuilding sooner. Roof over the cob house with any kind of dry wood. The harder the rain the more there will have to be if this roof is to shed the water. Each stick of the roof should rest on the back log and on the last—the fifth—stick of the cob house and be kept in place by the side sticks.

Fill the inside of the house with kindlings and set fire to them. The roof will burn on the under side, where the heat of the fire keeps it dry. As each stick burns through it falls into the fire that fills the interior of the cob house. The camper watches the fire and cooks through the opening between the fore stick and the top stick that supports the roof. He also feeds brands and small kindlings through this opening, but puts the large sticks on the roof.

It is surprising to see in how hard a rain this kind of fire will burn.—Youth's Companion.

The Flag Halyards.

"Many a slender flagpole has been ruined," said a rigger, "by drawing the halyards down too snugly when making them fast after hauling down the flag. If this is done in dry weather and it comes on wet the shrinking of the halyards thus drawn taut to start with may be enough to bend the pole, and if it should be left in that way long enough the pole would be permanently bent. Flag halyards when no flag is flying should be made fast with a little slack."

By way of aiding the farmer and adding to his success, the Salem Board of Trade is maintaining a farm management expert in connection with the Department of Agriculture. This is the first such work undertaken by a commercial body west of the Rocky Mountains. The expert investigates farming conditions in the Salem territory and advises farmers on all agricultural questions.

KIDNEY TROUBLES CAN BE AVOIDED

You cannot afford to neglect the slightest kidney ailment—it's hazardous to do so.

The poisonous waste material must be separated from the blood, and if the kidneys become weakened this is impossible.

THAT MEANS A POISONED SYSTEM

That's why neglect means trouble—the ailment becomes chronic and results in Rheumatism or Bright's Disease.

Beauchamp's Kidney Pills

Assist the kidneys in their function, strengthen them and prevent the ailment from becoming chronic.

They cleanse the blood and increase the circulation and supply the proper nourishment to body tissues.

They are a kidney medicine—intended for that and nothing else.
